THE WHISPERS OF A SHELL.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY H. S. KELLER.

Down there on the sand of the seashore
I picked up a shell to-day;
I whispered the message of loving,
Then cast the sea-token away.

"Go bring me my love from the ocean,
Go tell him return to me;
Go whisper, above the commotion
Of water and wind of the sea:
'Love, I cannot live without thee!'"

And to-day I went down to the seashore;
And there, cast up by the wave,
Was the shell I had whispered to, loving—
And its message came back from his grave.

CHAPTER II.—THE MENSIGNAC MANSION.

The superb home of the Mensignac family long ago disappeared. De Mensignac, marquis and general, was of ancient family, but had offered his sword to the First Consul, became a captain of dragoons at Austerlitz, general of brigade as Wagram, and at the period of his marriage with Marie Louise the Emperor had crowned the fortune of his protege by favoring his union with a noble and rich Austrian lady, whose father had accompanied the new Empress to Paris. Naturally, the Marquis had been forced to build a splendid mansion as a monument to the fame of the Empire. Unluckily, the Empire crumbled to pieces before the edifice was finished, and it was not until 1817 that he definately took up his abode in the new quarters. In spite of his services to the Emperor, the General managed to win new favor with the Bourbons, eventually becoming a lieutenant-general and Peer of France, and died shortly after the revolution of July. He left a son aged eighteen, and a daughter yet in the cradle—a daughter who had cost her mother her life.

The son, whose christian name was Roger, found himself, when he first entered society, the master of a fortune which, though greatly reduced by his father's extravagance, was still large; and he showed from the commencement a firmness of character and exemplary conduct very rare in one of his age.

It was whispered that this precocious maturity was due to a sad cause. The General's household had not been a happy one, during the last years of his life especially, and it was said that young Roger had assisted at many family disturbances.

Of course, these were only vague rumors. The General lived a great deal at court, at the opera, in fashionable circles, and received but few persons into his confidence. The magnificent mansion was opened once or twice a year to offer the aristocratic world luxurious fetes, at which the Marquise presided with timid grace.

This was all that Paris knew about her. Her death caused more excitement than her whole life had occasioned. People who moved in the best society thought that grief caused by preference given to a rival had greatly contributed to her premature end.

The small capitalists and dealers living in the neighborhood of the Mensignac mansion looked upon the General as a kind of Bluebeard; thus the family abode always retained its mysterious reputation. And yet nothing could be more simple than the life of those who inhabited it, for Roger had entirely devoted himself to the education of his young sister, whom he loved with an almost paternal affection. Jeanne, the sister, had grown up under her brother's roof, and had become a very accomplished young lady. An English governess had instructed her during her youth, and was then her lady companion.

Miss Georgina Fassitt had entered the house, in the quality of a reader, one year previous to the demise of the Marquise, and her conduct after the death of her employers had cleared her of the suspicion cast upon her by a rumor accusing her of disturbing the serenity of the General's household. She showed the greatest affection for Jeanne, who returned it with all her heart.

Roger was a mystery to the gossip-mongers. Educated and intelligent, he had the fault of not liking the world, and that is a failing that the world is least likely to pardon. He had mixed in the society of young men of his age and shared their pleasures; but had gradually retired from all active participation in their enjoyments, retaining but one friend, Edmund De Sartilly, the companion of his childhood. These facts had caused a number of rumors to be disseminated, finally reaching the point of accusing the young Marquis of dark deeds. It had always been held that the Trocadero Hill covered a number of vast underground tunnels, or catacombs, and there were many who affirmed that they could be reached from the Mensignac mansion.

Sartilly placed no faith in these suppositions, and attributed his friend's absences to some love affair in which a woman of high rank was concerned. The only mystery that he could not account for in Roger's life, was a money mystery. Master, when only eighteen years old, of the paternal fortune, and entrusted with the care of his sister, Roger had always lived on the footing of a man who possessed at least a rental of two hundred thousand francs; yet Sartilly was not aware that he possessed any other property than the Mensignac mansion, and that was more of an expense than anything else.

But it must be added that this peculiarity preoccupied the Viscount in a very slight degree, for, without counting his boyish affection for Roger, the last two years had awakened another and a stronger sentiment. For Edmund, Roger was above all the brother of an adorable young girl whom he loved, and by whom he considered himself beloved. Jeanne was now nearly eighteen years of age, and Sartilly was the only man who had ever been received by the brother and sister. Though there was a certain difference in their ages, they felt themselves drawn towards each other by mutual sympathy, while Roger had always shown himself favorable to the union of his sister and his best friend. In the meanwhile they lived upon that footing of charming intimacy that is established between a pure young girl and the man who is to be her husband.

On the eve of the startling adventure in the Bois de Boulogne, Sartilly had passed three hours in Jeanne's company, talking over their future prospects, and Roger had never seemed happier. He had joyously chaffed the two lovers, announcing that on the following day he wished to see them upon important matters. Edmund made sure that he referred to the indispensable questions of settlement, and was rejoiced to see the long-expected time approaching. But, on leaving the house, he had become tormented with impatience, and to pass away the time had allowed himself to be persuaded to go to the opera, and subsequently to the foolish supper at the Porte Maillot.

FLORENCE ST. JOHN, ENGLISH OPERA-BOUFFE VOCALIST.

Already upset by the scene at which he had assisted, the Viscount, after receiving Jeanne's letter, experienced that foreboding which seems to precede misfortune. While galloping towards Paris a thousand different ideas flashed through his brain, and he began to fancy that he was dreaming; the recollection of the gory head, the torn pocketbook and the horrible old man seeming so many visions called up by a fevered brain.

When he finally caught sight of the roof of his betrothed's house towering above the trees surrounding it, he had almost forgotten the stern reality, only remembering that Jeanne was in danger, and that each moment's delay might destroy their mutual happiness.

At the noise caused by the furious gallop of his horse, a servant quickly opened the front gates and advanced to hold his horse. He was, evidently, impatiently expected.

"Has the Marquis returned?" he quickly asked of the servant as he threw him his horse's reins.

"The Marquis is not at home now," replied the servant calmly, "but he came in about three o'clock this morning."

This unexpected reply somewhat reassured Sartilly, who added in a less excited manner:

"Can I see Mademoiselle De Mensignac?"

"Mademoiselle wishes you to wait for her in the library."

Sartilly rapidly crossed the courtyard, and directed his steps towards a staircase very familiar to him—the one leading to Roger's apartments. The library was the latter's favorite room, and, in spite of the smoke raised by the cigars of her brother and his friend, many were the evenings when she had bravely seated herself at the massive oak table. Once in the room just mentioned, everything denoted the recent presence of the proprietor. The latest novel was open on the table; engravings and water colors were scattered about, but, above all, there was a pen, resting upon a sheet of white paper, in which the ink was still moist.

To all appearances, Roger had just quitted the apartment, so Sartilly began to feel at ease.

Suddenly his foot pressed upon something that caused him a singular sensation. He quickly picked it up, and could not restrain himself from uttering a cry of surprise.

What he held in his hand was no more nor less than a lock of hair, and a ray of sunlight caused it to shine with golden lustre.

He had not entirely recovered from his emotion when the door of the library was opened. He recognized Jeanne's light footstep, and threw the lock of hair aside.

"Have you seen Roger?" she asked in a broken voice.

"I fancied that he was here."

A despairing gesture escaped poor Jeanne, and she sank sobbing upon a lounge. Her pale face, and eyes bloodshot with excessive weeping, denoted so much suffering that Sartilly immediately advanced to offer his assistance; but she gently signed him to be seated.

"What has happened, dearest Jeanne?" asked the Viscount, his whole soul moved with sympathy for the beautiful girl.

It was some time before she could force herself to reply, but she finally managed to murmur:

"My brother is dead!"

A sharp spasm contracted the young man's heart as he recalled the events of the morning.

Could it be true? Had the pocketbook been torn from the breast of his murdered friend?

"But I saw Roger this very night," he murmured.

"Where? At what hour?"

"At the opera, towards two o'clock—yes, towards two o'clock," replied Sartilly, as if trying to collect his thoughts.

"He was here at three o'clock."

"But then it's impossible! He cannot have been killed in this house."

"But you must know that he has gone out since you sent for him."

"Am I mad or dreaming, Jeanne? Did you say that I sent for Roger?"

"Why, certainly!"

"Who came to bring him?"

"Your groom, Toby."

A cruel thought flashed through Edmund's brain. He asked himself if Jeanne had not suddenly become demented.

"Jeanne," he said in voice that trembled in spite of himself, "I love you with all the strength of my soul. You know it, and you also know that Roger is a brother to me. When my father was killed, in 1830, while defending the Louvre, your father received me as a son, and, since his death, Roger has inherited the affection that I bore him. If he is in danger, I will save him; if he is dead, I will avenge him. But I must know everything."

This clear and concise statement of facts profoundly impressed the young girl, who wiped away her tears, glancing gratefully and tenderly at her lover.

"I now remember," she said slowly, "that Roger remained in my apartments until a rather late hour. He was gay, more joyous than usual. Gradually he became sad, and spoke to me of our mother, then of you, and I remember he told me that our marriage would soon take place."

Jeanne blushed while pronouncing these last words, and she hesitated to continue.

"He wished," she said after a moment's pause, "to attend to the settlement of my business affairs, with a lawyer, this morning. 'I shall not always be with you, little sister,' he repeated to me with a singular accent, 'and I do not wish Edmund to marry a woman without a dowry.' I mention these things to you, dear Edmund, because it is necessary that you should know everything that preceded the events of this night."

"When did Roger leave you?"

"Towards midnight. He told me that he would probably be in at a later hour, but begged me to come to the library at ten o'clock this morning. I remember his last words: 'It will be very annoying for you to listen to the reading of a lot of law papers, but you are now eighteen years of age, dear Jeanne, and must begin to get used to it.' And then," continued the young girl, whose voice quivered with emotion, "he kissed me and I fancied that I felt a tear fall on my forehead."

"But you told me that he returned."

"What I am now going to tell you is so dramatic and improbable that you will hardly beleive me," she added in a sorrowful manner.

Sartilly held out his hand to her in so frank and loyal a manner that she involuntarily gave him her hand in return, and continued, lowering her voice:

"I am a woman, and I believe in presentiments. After Roger's departure, morbid thoughts oppressed me. A secret voice seemed to warn me of coming evil. I tried to sleep, but could not close my eyes. I finally sank into a state of unconsciousness, but awoke with a sudden start. You know that from my windows I can see Roger's apartments perfectly. A bright light was shining from the library; from the identical windows of the room in which we are now seated. An exclamation of joy escaped me—my brother had returned. Almost at the same moment a singular desire came over me. I wanted to see him; to speak to him; to tell him of my stupid fears, and beg of him to scold me soundly. I fancied that I already heard him ask me if I was of the Mensignac blood; for that was the manner in which he was accustomed to laugh at my childish terrors. I had a momentary idea of awakening Miss Georgina, but I reflected that it would not be quite right to impose such a nocturnal trip upon her. I then threw a cloak over my shoulders, and left my room. I distinctly remember that the clock struck the hour of three at the moment I closed my door behind me. I had to cross a long glass-fronted gallery, and walked rapidly. I had a lamp in my hand, and, while crossing the covered terrace, did not lose sight of the lighted windows of the library. I had passed Roger's room, when my lamp suddenly went out, and I found myself in total obscurity."

"And what did you see then?" asked Edmund, almost as much moved as his betrothed.

"Nothing! nothing! At least, nothing real. But I heard a strange noise coming from the left wing, and my blood froze in my veins. It was a dull and heavy noise resembling the rolling of a brazen chariot. Almost at the same moment the light in the library disappeared. I was alone in the silence of the night. I was seized with an uncontrollable terror and fancied I was about to die; then gradually recovered a little strength and dragged myself as far as my room, nearly losing my senses in doing so. An impulse stronger than fear finally attracted me to the window. The moon was showing itself at intervals, and lighted up the courtyard with its rays. I then distinctly saw a man come from the staircase of the right wing, open the little door of the garden and rapidly disappear. It was Toby."

"Toby!" cried Sartilly, bounding with surprise. "Why, that's impossible. He drove me to the opera at one o'clock, and at five o'clock, when we left for the Bois de Boulogne, he was still seated in my carriage in the Rue Pelletier."

Jeanne shook her head.

"Early this morning I sent to inquire about Roger, but he was not in the house. The porter had heard him come in, by the little garden gate, shortly before two o'clock, and fancied that he had heard him leave by the same door between three and four o'clock. Then I once more began to get alarmed, and when ten o'clock arrived I sent for you, and have waited ever since, fancying that I was going mad with terror."

"Dear Jeanne," he said kindly, "you are alarming yourself uselessly. Do you not know that Roger is sometimes absent for whole weeks, even for months?"

"Never without warning me."

"But the return and subsequent departure by the little door in the garden are quite natural. I remember hearing Roger say at least twenty times that he always went that way at night so as not to disturb his servants."

"But I have not told you everything. Listen. I was barely four years of age when my father died. It was on a Winter's night similar to the one that has just terminated, and I was in my cot in the room in which father was dying. All the servants had assembled around his bed. I was alone in my little cot. Suddenly a strange form passed before me. It was a woman dressed in a long, red robe, and her hair hanging unfastened around her shoulders. She crossed the room, and it seemed to me as if she disappeared in the tapestry. A few minutes later I heard Roger's sobs. Our father was dead!"

Sartilly once more glanced at his betrothed with anxiety. Again he began to fear that she had become demented.

"Well," cried Jeanne in a sharp tone, "that woman! I saw her again this night. So you see that one of our house must have died!"

Fear is contagious. Especially fear caused by supernatural recitals; and the Viscount had not been able to repress a shudder as he listened to the young girl. There was, besides, in this fantastic account, a side of it that was too real to be trifled with; and Jeanne's story threw a certain light over the tragedy of the Bois de Boulogne. This mysterious, murdered woman, whose image pursued Sartilly like a bloody nightmare, was she the red-robed woman who wandered about the Mensignac mansion upon the fatal night? Involuntarily, Edmund turned round to look for the lock of hair that he had cast on one side. But he could no longer see it. And in the uncertain light of the library it seemed to him as if the pale head, surrounded by its golden hair, was watching him in silent agony. Jeanne's trembling voice recalled the Viscount to himself.

"I saw her!" repeated the young girl; "I saw her. She passed close to me; the long train of her dress touched me. She walked noiselessly, and suddenly disappeared at a corner of the gallery."

"Were you able to distinguish her features?"

"No. My lamp had gone out and the moon had disappeared behind a cloud. But I could see that she was pale, and that her long, fair hair fell about her shoulders."

These last words convinced Edmund that strange and terrible events had taken place in the mansion during the preceding night.

"Listen to me, Jeanne," he said, taking her two hands between his own. "I cannot believe in visions, but I see that there is a mystery here that must be promptly cleared up. Until Roger's return, will you give me your entire confidence?"

"You know that I have no longer a friend in the world but you," she murmured in reply.

"Then I will ask you to answer me as you would a brother."

"I have nothing to hide," replied the young girl with a clear and honest look.

"This woman whom you have seen—did she not recall recollections other than those of the night your father died?"

"True," said Jeanne, thoughtfully. "It seems to me that her form, manner and falling hair remind me of a person I have seen several times; but I do not know that it is not in my dreams."

"Was it not at a ball, or at a theatre, or in the Champs Elysees, or while you were driving in the park?"

"No, no," repeated Jeanne with hesitation. "It was not; and yet when I was still a child, and Roger was in the habit of driving me out during the fine, Spring mornings, he frequently bowed to a woman whose marvelous beauty struck me, and whose image was recalled by the—vision—I saw last night."

"And since your childhood, during the last few years, have you not met this woman again?"

"Never. If I had seen her, I should easily remember it."

"Are you certain that you have not seen her seated in a superb carriage drawn by four horses?"

"Since last Autumn I have been out but very little; Roger frequently rode on horseback; so I only had Miss Georgina to accompany me, and she dreads the cold so much that I have had to renounce driving in an open carriage."

A short silence followed, and Edmund, who began to fancy that he had found a clue, again fell back into utter darkness.

"And so, during the night of your father's death, you are sure that you saw the same woman that passed you last night in the gallery?"

"I am sure of it."

"And the unknown person you were in the habit of seeing in the carriage when you were young, did she not recall the first woman you had seen?"

"I could not say," replied Jeanne simply. "The two recollections came back to me at about the same time this evening—the first clearly, the second in a more vague and uncertain manner—but never before have I tried to connect them in my mind. Now, I remember that the day following the death of my father, I told Miss Georgina of what I had seen, and she scolded me soundly, telling me not to mention it to anybody."

"It's very strange," murmured Sartilly.

"Then, if even you despair, Roger is dead," sobbed poor Jeanne.

The spectacle of her grief restored all the Viscount's energy.

"Jeanne," he said firmly, "if you will help me, I swear that I will find your brother."

"What must I do?"

"Let me act, and give me a little more information. Do the servants know anything concerning the event of the past night?"

"They know that their master has not returned; but they must think that it is because he has missed his appointment with the lawyer."

"I will see the lawyer myself, to-day. But have you mentioned the matter to Miss Georgina?"

"Yes; but she laughed at my fears. I have already told you that she does not believe in ghosts."

Sartilly was silently weighing the whole affair over in his mind, as if absorbed by an idea that he did not like to encourage, while the young girl tried to read his thoughts in his face.

"But it is impossible—Toby did not come here this night!" he suddenly exclaimed, as if speaking to himself.

Jeanne was upon the point of replying, when a footman announced the family lawyer. Edmund and Jeanne both sprang to their feet as if moved by one electric battery.

"Remain with me, Edmund," said Jeanne, after having signed to the servant to show the lawyer in.

A moment later, Maitre Calmet, the lawyer, was in the room. He was still a young man in age, and his face seemed to reflect both loyalty and intelligence. It was evident now that he was the bearer of grave tidings.

"Excuse me, mademoiselle," he said in a low, quiet voice, "if I have insisted upon seeing you this morning; but I had a very important appointment with the Marquis, and I have not been able to see him." The lawyer here glanced at Edmund.

"Viscount Sartilly, my betrothed husband," said Jeanne simply.

"I am Roger De Mensignac's most intimate friend," added Edmund.

"Then, sir," continued the lawyer, "you will perfectly understand my anxiety and persistence. The Marquis, whose exactitude I have had reason to admire for fifteen years, is not to be found on the day which he was to place in my hands the amount of a note, signed in my office, on behalf of one of my clients who lent him a considerable sum of money last year, and I really do not know how to account for his absence."

"I was not aware that Roger was ever forced to borrow money," said Sartilly dryly; "but if you will let me know the amount, I am ready to pay it for him."

"The sum to be paid me to-day," said the lawyer slowly, "is five hundred thousand francs!"

The Viscount was half stupefied at the mention of the amount.

The lawyer showed that he thought the absence of the Marquis was premeditated. This did not escape Edmund, who felt deeply for his friend as well as for his betrothed.

"Excuse me, sir," he said haughtily. "But did Mons. De Mensignac know exactly the time this note came due? For I must acknowledge that the amount thoroughly surprises me."

"The Marquis sent for me yesterday," replied the lawyer calmly, "and had a consultation with me respecting this same payment. He left, appointing ten o'clock this morning for our next meeting, telling me to prepare a receipt. I was to place the money in the hands of my client to-day, and I have taken it upon myself not to inform the latter, as yet, of Mons. De Mensignac's absence."

"But then, sir," exclaimed Sartilly, "since Roger spoke to you on this matter, he must also have consulted you upon the stocks or other assets that were to be sold to realize the sum. Are you not his business agent?"

"I have been the family lawyer for the last twenty years," replied Maitre Calmet, without changing countenance; "but a short time after the death of General De Mensignac the Marquis sold all his stocks, and doubtless converted the amount into cash, for from that date I have ceased to be the depositary of his fortune. The house and the surrounding grounds represent Mademoiselle De Mensignac's share in the General's property."

The honor of Sartilly's dearest friend was gradually crumbling before him; the name of Mensignac, nobly borne by the woman he loved, was sinking into a dark chasm of shame. The unhappy Viscount lowered his head, and with wandering gaze seemed to be sounding the depth of the abyss before him. Jeanne had hardly understood that her brother's ruin was in question. She had only one thought in her mind; the fearful vision of the previous night was continually floating before her eyes; and three words alone came to her lips:

"Roger is dead!"

The young girl's despair recalled Sartilly to himself, and he remembered that he was now the only one in the world that she had to depend upon.

"Sir," he said to the lawyer, "Mademoiselle De Mensignac knows nothing about money questions, and I think that we can spare her all painful details."

The lawyer bowed in assent.

"If only as Roger's friend," continued Sartilly, "I hope that Mademoiselle De Mensignac will allow me to represent her in this sad affair. Will you, Jeanne?"

The young girl arose from her seat, pressed her lover's hand, and, bowing to Maitre Calmet, left the room without another word.

She knew that Edmund wished to sacrifice himself for her, and she esteemed him enough to accept the sacrifice.

"We are alone," said the Viscount quickly, as soon as his betrothed had left the room, "and now I can talk plainly to you. My fortune is more than enough to pay Roger's debt, and I am ready to pay it."

"Your generosity does you credit. I am very happy to see the name of De Mensignac saved from dishonor."

"Please tell me as quickly as possible what arrangements I must make to settle this affair. You must be conversant with Roger's business affairs. Can you explain the cause that determined him to borrow so large a sum at so short a time?"

"I have never been able to find it out. About six years ago, the Marquis borrowed a pretty large sum of money, four hundred thousand francs, and it was repaid exactly at the end of a year. Besides, the lender was the same, and he would not have waited a day."

"And has Roger never told you how he employed these large sums of money?"

"Never. I even remember that, when I once made an observation upon the subject, it was not very well received. But," added the lawyer timidly, "you did me the honor to ask me what arrangements could be made ——"

"Certainly. You must understand that I cannot command such a sum of money in an hour."

"Unhappily, Viscount," said the lawyer sadly, "your generosity will be useless."

"What do you mean?"

"The lender will insist upon having his money this very day. I am directed not to accord any delay or to accept any guaranty. If the money is not paid before night, legal action will be immediately commenced."

"But it's impossible. A loan of such magnitude is not a simple promissory note."

"There are, in this affair," continued Maitre Calmet, "some secrets that I have no knowledge of, and I fear that behind this stern insistance upon legal rights, there is—what shall I say?—a spirit of revenge."

"Perhaps so. Who is the lender?"

"A rich foreigner who lives in Paris at intervals, and who has only returned here during the last month. His name is De Noreff, and he lives in that fine house at the corner of the Rue de Varennes."

"And so it is he!" shouted Sartilly passionately, as he ran towards the extremity of the library. "The proof! It is there! I must have it!"

Suddenly he picked up an object that the lawyer did not see, and dashed out into the courtyard. The horse he had ridden was still waiting in charge of one of the servants. Jumping into the saddle, the Viscount plunged his spurs into the animal's sides, and with lightning speed dashed towards the headquarters of the Parisian police. Arrived before the dreaded building, his passage was barred by a sentinel.

"I wish to see the Prefet," he said quickly.

"Have you a letter of introduction?"

"No; but I have to see him upon so serious a matter that those who try to stop me will have to be responsible for the delay."

The Viscount's manner evidently had its effect upon the functionary, for he soon called one of his comrades, and told him to conduct Sartilly to the Prefet's office.

On his way to that official's headquarters, he reflected that, though about to denounce Noreff as the murderer of his wife and Roger, it might be claimed by the police that the murder had been committed in the Mensignac house and that Roger was an accomplice. But still he resolved to speak, feeling sure that a Mensignac was incapable of such infamy and that Roger must have fallen into some horrible trap.

At last they arrived at the Chief's office, but only to discover that he was engaged, and so they were directed to see the Chief of detectives.

What was Sartilly's astonishment, when he was ushered into the presence of the said Chief, to recognize the Commissary who had first taken hold of the affair in the Bois de Boulogne, in the act of reporting the matter to his superior.

"I was upon the point of writing to you, asking you to call upon me," said the police official politely, "and I will now write to Baron Polard and Mons. Versoix. We shall have need of all the information we can get, for we have made a very bad beginning by allowing the murderer to escape, and I fear that it will be difficult to catch him again."

"I bring you his name," said the Viscount simply.

"Thank you," replied the chief of detectives, trying to repress a smile of incredulity, "for a discovery all the more precious from the fact that the identity of the victim is not yet established."

"The victim was assassinated by her husband," said Sartilly firmly, "whose name is De Noreff, and he lives in the Rue de Varennes, No. 133."

"Noreff!" exclaimed the detective, who had become serious when he noticed the Viscount's unhesitating reply. "Noreff? Is not that the name of a rich foreigner who travels a great deal?"

"That's the man; and his wife's head will be recognized by every frequenter of the Champs Elysees."

"We must have his record among our files," replied the detective. He then rang a bell, wrote a few words on a slip of paper, and gave it to a secretary. "And now please be kind enough to tell me upon what you base your accusation."

"This man has murdered my friend Roger De Mensignac, as well as his wife. Roger disappeared during the night; and I believe the motive of the crime is that my friend was smitten with the charms of Madame De Noreff."

The Chief gazed attentively at the Viscount, and in the meanwhile a messenger placed a slip of paper in his hand.

"His record is not a very good one," muttered the detective. "Ah! here's a coincidence—the name of Mensignac was connected with his in 1834."

A few moments of complete silence elapsed, and then the Chief said firmly:

"Are you prepared to testify in a police-court to what you have just told me?"

"I am."

"Very well. Jottrat, have a carriage ready, downstairs, in five minutes, for this gentleman and myself. You get into another carriage with three of the plain-clothes men, and follow at about fifty paces." The secretary moved towards the door. "Choose the men from among the most reliable on duty, and let each of them be armed with a pair of pistols. You, my dear sir," turning to the Commissary-of-police from Saint Cloud, "be kind enough to wait for me here. I hope to be back in about two hours' time, and shall need you to identify the witnesses." Bowing politely to the Viscount, he added: "If you will be kind enough to accompany me, I am at your orders."

"In what manner can my presence be of use?"

"It is indispensable to identify a man unknown to me and to my officers."

"And where are we going?"

"To arrest Christopher Valdemar De Noreff, a Swedish subject, strongly suspected of being a Russian spy, and accused by you of having murdered his wife!"

BLOODY BILL THE TERROR.

"Whoop-la, whoop!" thundered a hairy, herculean, heavily-armed terror of terrible fellows, as he kicked open the rickety door of the Frontier Saloon and glanced threateningly upon the quiet crowd within. With a quiet swagger and many horrible oaths, he advanced to the bar and said:

"How's biz ter-day, Toddyman?"

"Dull, Bill, dull. Can't yer help me out?"

"Of co'se I can—an' will," answered the Terror. Turning, he called out to the loafers scattered about the room:

"Come up hyer, come up, yer d——d coyotes! an' treat yo'se'fs an' me, too, at yo' own expense. That's right," he continued, as the ten or twelve persons addressed sprang nimbly from their keg perches and smilingly expressed their willingness to accept any invitation, however worded, the said terror might extend.

"Hump 'er 'long, ——, an' in a hurry," he growled savagely, as he noted one solitary exception to the unanimitiy of the acceptances, "or by the crook of my elbow I'll hurt yer; hurt yer bad."

The single exception, however, quietly retained his seat, and neither by gesture nor speech did he show the slightest consciousness of the presence and the language of the most famous and infamous, desperate and dreaded devil that had ever frightened a Western sheriff into temporary civility.

Great was our Terror's amazement, and greater his wrath, when he became convinced that it was actually the intention of the rash stranger to ignore him and his mandatory invitation. With huge, self-acting revolver in hand, he started toward him. As he approached nearer the silent unknown uncoiled his long legs and extended himself gradually upward and upward and upward, until at last he presented to our astonished vision the towering form of the tallest and thinnest mortal we had ever seen.

When within three or four feet the Terror paused and said: "I gives yer tu understan' I'm Bloody Bill, the terror of sherruts an' the pattern-saint of undertakers. D'yer hear me?"

"Oh, yes; I'm not deaf," was the reply, in a cool, steady voice.

"First-rate record, that," was the reply.

"I'm a jumping jumbo—am the very fe'ther that broke the camel's back—I'm a Texas steer stampeded—I'm a Curnel straight from Arkinsaw—an' —— —— yer' look out fur I'm goin' to shoot!" Simultaneously with the elevation of the revolver, the stranger's foot flew forward and upward, the ball, meant for his heart, went crashing harmlessly through the roof—and then with a rapidity of movement that gave to his russet brogan the appearance of a chunk of lightning in a mighty hurry he kicked Bloody Bill under the chin, behind the ear, in the stomach, in the back, on the chin, with first one foot and then the other, and so effectually, too, that the astonished and thoroughly shocked man-eater found it impossible to use a single one of the half dozen weapons attached to his belt. But the terror was really brave, and he struggled pluckily to uphold and preserve the sanguinary reputation so dear and profitable to him, until his slim and supple antagonist finally terminated the fight by a double-footed kick that stretched Bloody Bill prone and breathless upon the floor.

When restored to consciousness he approached the great unknown and said:

"Fur de las'—but, fust, what shall I call yer? Gener'l—Dook—Prisident?"

"Plain mister," said the other.

"What! yer a plain mister!" exclaimed the Terror, incredulously.

"Jusso."

"All right, all right, sense you say so; by thunder! yer deserve promoshun. Now, mister, for sum years I've thot I was a whole menag'ry in myself—lyon, elephint, wulf, an' all that—but I'll be darned ef hit don't look ter-day like I'd been runnin' a two-bit sideshow all er along. Ef argreeyble, sir, I'd like to l'arn who an' what yer air."

"I," replied the stranger, in a deep, grave voice, "am the Great Amerikin Mule."

"God be thanked," gasped the trembling Terror, "that you didn't have on yer iron shoes!"—Houston (Tex.) Post.

FISHING.

Maybe this is fun, sitting in the sun,
With a book and parasol, as my angler wishes,
While he dips his line in the ocean brine,
Under the delusion that his bait will catch the fishes.

'Tis romantic—yes! but I must confess
Thoughts of shady rooms at home somehow seem more inviting.
But I dare not move. "Quiet, there, my love,"
Says my angler, "for I think a monstrous fish is biting."

Oh, of course, it's bliss—still how hot it is!
And the rock I'm sitting on grows harder every minute,
While my fisher waits, trying various baits,
But the basket by his side, I see, has nothing in it.

It is just the way to pass a July day—
Arcadian and sentimental, dreamy, idle, charming.
But how fierce the sunlight falls, and the way that insect crawls
Along my neck and down my back is really quite alarming.

"Any luck?" I gently ask of the angler at his task.
"There's something pulling at the line," he says;
"I've almost caught it;"
But when with a blistered face we our homeward steps retrace,
We take the little basket just as empty as we brought it.

THE NEXT ROOM.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY BOB WATT.

The season had been an awfully hard one. Though I had managed to put in enough weeks to pay all my expenses and leave me a few dollars over, yet I had not met with enough success to enable me to make a trip across the briny deep, or even have a few weeks' recreation at a seaside resort. When I counted up my little balance at the beginning of July, I found I had barely sufficient to tide me over the dog-days. I had been lucky enough to sign for the following season with a solid combination at a decent salary, and was therefore happy. The part assigned me was a very strong one—in fact, considerably higher than I had ever attempted; and as I knew I would be idle all of the next season if I did not make a hit on the first night, I determined by hard study to master the part. In my perambulations in New York I ran across a small hotel, which had a very large patronage during the Winter, but which in Summer was comparatively deserted. I soon made arrangements with the landlord for the use of a room for a very small sum; and as there were several cheap restaurants and good lunch-routes in that neighborhood, I felt sure that I would be able to pay all my bills up to the day when the combination would start out.

When I was shown to my room by a good-natured Irish porter, I was not favorably impressed with its looks; but still it was Hobson's choice with me, and I was compelled to take it. It was very small, and situated on the top floor. The furniture had evidently been in use for many years. There was but one window, and the view from that was not very picturesque. The huge walls of a factory shut out all view of the world beyond. The whirring of the machinery in the factory made an awful clatter; but I consoled myself with the thought that, as I was to play heavy villain in the piece I could pit my puny voice against this noise, and thus coach it to such a volume of strength that I would make the auditorium resound with the echo when I once more trod the boards. There was a door leading into the next room, and over it a very large transom covered with a piece of calico.

"How do you like it, sir?" asked my guide.

"It is not a palace, by a long shot," I said; "but it's cheap, and I'll take it."

"Any baggage to come up?"

"No, my wordly possessions are all in this," I replied, as I pointed to a well-worn valise.

"Well, cash in advance is the rule of this here hotel when a boarder aint got no baggage," he said in a surly tone, as he realized the fact that I was a boarder who would not bestow any "tips."

"Very good, John," I said; "I'll see the proprietor."

The porter left, and in a few minutes I went downstairs and paid for a month's rent in advance. I had already moved in when I toted my valise upstairs; so I was fixed for a month at least, as I could not afford to pay for another room, even if this one did not prove comfortable.

I sallied forth to meet the manager whom I had engaged with, to get my part, so as to be able to start studying the next morning. It was quite late when I returned, and the Irish porter nodded sleepily to me. Soon we were chatting like old acquaintances. He happened to remark that there was a crazy man occupying one of the rooms on the same floor as mine, but added that he was not dangerous at all, and kept quiet. I thought nothing of this at the time, and soon retired to dream of a successful season.

The next morning I started in to work, and progressed finely. The room was not so bad as it might have been, and I actually got to like it. For a week I heard nothing of the crazy man the porter had spoken of, and thought he must be a myth. At last the story slipped from my mind, and I kept on with my work undisturbed. As I had been told there were but few boarders on that floor, I made all the noise I wanted to; and as I practiced all sorts of falls and imaginary combats, and gave my deep bass voice full play, I was pleased to think I had struck a hotel where noise did not bother the other boarders.

The next room often provoked my curiosity as to the occupant; for, though I frequently heard footsteps in the room, I could never see anyone entering or leaving it. I often wondered if I bothered my neighbor; but, as he or she never complained, I was not going to ask. I was getting along very nicely and congratulating myself that I would be letter-perfect in part, both as to voice and as to gesture, when my first month was up, and I was so well satisfied with my room that I cheerfully paid for the balance of time I would stay there. When I counted the cash I had remaining it made me shudder, and I knew I would have to do some tall scrimping and scraping to get through with a whole skin.

It was the first night after I had paid the second installment of rent that the occupant of the next room commenced to bother me. I had studied hard all day, and was just dozing off when I was awakened by an awful crash. I sprang from the bed, and as I listened I heard the heavy footsteps of a man as he paced to and fro. There came the sound of a gruff voice, a cry of terror, and then all was still. It flashed across my mind at once that the occupant of the next room was the crazy man the porter had told me of, and he was under the influence of one of his attacks. I sat for an hour, shivering and shaking, and momentarily expecting to see him come crashing through the frail communicating door. At last, as I heard no noise, I crept into bed; but you can rest assured my night was spent in taking a succession of catnaps. Every little noise awoke me, and I expected every moment to feel the fingers of a madman encircling my neck and chocking the life out of me. The next morning I was up early, and after my constitutional walk and a frugal meal I felt better and thought that, as the madman had only one spell during a whole month, I could get along very well for the rest of the time I was to stay there. Anyhow, I was compelled to stay there, as I had not sufficient means to pay for another room, and my contract for the following season expressly stipulated that no salaries should be advanced. When I returned to my room all was quiet, and I at once commenced studying. For an hour the madman in the next room kept quiet, and I congratulated myself that his fit was over and I was to have peace. It was a mistake, however. Just as I was striking a tragic attitude and bowling forth a curse on my enemies, I heard a crash in the next room. Then came incoherent mutterings, the heavy paring to and fro of a man, followed by curses and jabberings that struck terror into my heart. All day this was kept up. The noise was something frightful, and I felt sure the man must be a raving maniac. I looked around for a weapon of defense in case he should break through the communicating door, but could find nothing but a slim bed-slat. I thought it would be better to use this as a brace for the door; so I fixed it as well as I could, and then awaited the attack. He did not come, however, and I passed the day with terror filling my heart. I was afraid and—if I must say it—ashamed to ask the landlord to change my quarters.

That night the occupant of the next room quieted down, and I got some sleep; but the next morning he was at it again. I went out for a walk, and came back; but he was making more noise than ever before. Every once in a while I could hear the clashing of steel, as if he were sharpening a sword with which to kill me. At last I tried another plan. Quietness did not seem to soothe him, so I commenced to go through my exercises. I ranted, stormed, shouted and yelled; but he went me one better every time. If I kept quiet, he moderated his voice a little; but if I commenced again, he made all the more noise. Another night came, and I was determined I would leave the hotel the next day. As it became dark, he seemed to get worse. About eleven o'clock he extinguished his light, and as a precaution I put out mine. Then I heard him moving furniture up against the communicating door. I thought he was making preparations to batter it down, and I commenced piling my scanty furniture against the door as a barricade. I then opened the window, so my screams for assistance could be heard when the time came. For a few moments there was quietness. What deviltry was the madman planning? The doubt and uncertainty was more than I could stand; so I cautiously crawled up on the barricade, meaning to look through the transom into the next room. I had reached the top, when a sudden gust of air from the open window lifted the curtain which hung over the transom, and I saw two gleaming balls of fire on the other side of the glass. I knew what it was at once. The madman was endeavoring to climb over the transom, and there I was within a few feet of him. I endeavored to get down off the baricade, when I lurched and fell, and then, with a yell, the madman smashed the glass; and as I struck the door he grasped me with his sinewy hands and pulled me towards him. I tried to loosen his grip, but it was no use. I fought like a tiger, and so did he, until suddenly I felt sure he was falling and I tried to pull away; but he still held on, and I was slowly dragged through the transom. Then, as we were still interlocked in an embrace that it seemed naught but death would loosen, we fell in a heap on the floor of the next room. As the thought flashed across my brain that I was in the power of a maniac, it nerved me to fight for my life. His fingers were grasping me by the throat, and in vain I exerted all my strength to loosen them. Around and around the room we went, smashing the furniture and both yelling at the top of our voices. He got my head in the washbasin, but the china soon was broken, and at last we were free. I tried to escape, but he soon had hold of me again. Suddenly the door leading into the corridor was battered down, and lights from a number of candles in the hands of the proprietor, porter and guests illumined the room.

"Seize that madman!" I yelled, as I threw myself into the arms of the proprietor for protection.

"That man is crazy!" screamed my antagonist.

I looked at him, and he looked at me. Much to my surprise, the man whom I had thought was a madman was a brother-professional, Dick Melville, the heavy-man with a well-known theatrical combination. The proprietor demanded an explanation. I at once gave my side of the story, telling how I thought from the voice in the next room that it was occupied by a madman. Dick Melville then said that this was just what he had thought. Then the whole case was plain to both of us. In practicing our heavy villainy, with its rantings and shoutings, we had frightened each other. Turning to the porter, I said:

"It's all your fault. Why did you tell me there was a madman on this floor?"

"Yes," said Dick, "that was what made me so frightened. He told me the same story."

"Well," said the porter, "you actor-fellows are all crazy onnyhow, and, begorra, I thought I might make you kape still by telling yez both there were a crazy man upon this floor."

The humorous explanation put us all in good humor. Dick agreed to pay the landlord for the damage done by the fight, and we all retired, I to get the first good night's rest I had had for three days.

THE BOSTON BOY'S FAVORITE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"Pa," said a Boston urchin of eight, "couldn't Daniel Webster knock out Sullivan in three rounds?"

The Boston father did not look surprised as, perhaps, a New York father would, but said:

"Not much, my lad!"

"Was Dan an n. g. slugger, pa?"

"Daniel Webster wasn't a slugger, at all, boy. What are you talking about?"

"He wasn't a slugger? What did that man you was talking with call him the 'great ex-pounder' for, then?"

"Oh, that's a pet name they called the old man, sonny."

"Huh! ex-pounder is n. g. 'Rah for Sullivan—'rah!" and the Boston urchin skipped away, cheering for his favorite.

JAMES PURSELL JR., secretary of the Arlington Club, 52 W. Fourteenth street, this city, advertises that that organization purpose making a trip during the latter part of next month, if they can hear from clubs in Carbondale, Honesdale, Wilkesbarre and Scranton, Pa., Port Jervis, Binghamton, Owego, Elmira and Rochester, N. Y., and Hamilton, Guelph and London, Ont. The Arlingtons play at Middletown, N. Y., July 31, and with the Young Americas at Germantown, Pa., Aug. 2.

THE PHILADELPHIANS are asking how it came to pass that the Athletics allowed themselves to be so badly whipped by the Mets in five out of six successive games in New York and Philadelphia, and yet turned round and defeated the team from Brooklyn as they did after the latter had given the Mets the hardest kind of work to beat them by small-figure scores. The Mets helped the Athletics to win the championship last year. Are the Athletics returning the favor?

WE HAVE LETTERS for the managers of the following clubs, viz.: Mt. Vernon, Bridgeport, Waterbury, Tuckahoe and New Rochelle.

MONUMENTAL MATTERS.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 26, 1884.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER: The past week has been a quiet one in our city. Manager Barnie's nine has been down to Washington to play the first series with the Washington Club. Bad weather, hard luck and bad playing seemed to have overtaken the club.....Emslie, Traffley and Manning are still complaining, but will be in condition to start on trip Monday night.....Lew Dickerson has signed with the Baltimores, and will take Gardner's place in right-field.....Barnie has also signed Crosby of the Chicago Club.....The boys will play well when they get to Pittsburg. Sam Trott, Jimmie Clinton and Little Macullar are playing ball for all it is worth. We managed to win a game to-day from the Washington Club, and the boys now think our streak of hard luck is over..... We have had great luck on umpires this week. John Kelly and Jack Valentine have officiated. Both are good umpires, and they are also clever gentlemen..... While your correspondent was in Washington he was treated very kindly by that pleasant gentleman Manager Hollingshead.....The Baltimore Unions, who have been in Philadelphia the past week doing up the Keystone Club, will return home Tuesday to play the Bostons.....Lew Brown and O'Brien of the Boston Unions are in town, both looking well.....A. J. Granger, the well-known tobacconist and sporting-man of this city, is spending a few weeks at Atlantic City. He has his team of boys, Jim Hague and George M., with him.

MATTERS IN WILLIAMSPORT, PA.

JULY 26, 1884.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER: July 24 the home club defeated the Warrens by 8 to 5. This was only the second game lost by the Warrens out of eighteen played on their tour. From here they returned home to recuperate..... McCracken, short-stop of the Williamsport Club, dislocated his shoulder during a game with the Littlestown Club a couple of weeks ago, and has been unable to play since. He is one of the best players in the nine, and is greatly missed.....Smith, catcher; Tiernan, pitcher; and Brooks, first-baseman, all of the same club, did some fine work during their game with the Warrens July 24. Smith is brother of the pitcher of the Lancasters..... One of the closest-contested games ever played in this section was on July 26, on the Williamsport grounds, between Lock Haven and the home nine. At the closing of the ninth inning the score stood 2 to 1 in favor of the Lock Havens. Ettinger came to the bat, with two men out. He made a scratch-hit and reached first, and then stole second. McKee now made a scratch-hit, reached first and stole second, with Ettinger on third. Sale's bat made a base-hit and brought in Ettinger and McKee, winning the game amid the greatest enthusiasm.

Kansas City vs. St. Louis.

The first game between these clubs was played July 27 in Kansas City, Mo., and resulted in the St. Louis adding another to their long list of victories. The figures at the finish were 9 to 4, in favor of the visitors. The same result marked the game played July 28, the St. Louis then being victorious by a score of 8 to 2.

The Championship Record

up to July 28, inclusive, shows no alteration in the standing of the clubs. The St. Louis still continue to have a long lead, with the Baltimore a good second and the other clubs ranking as follows:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

The League Championship.

Providence took the lead July 28 in the League pennant race, four defeats out of the last five games played by the Bostons having given them a very bad set-back. Buffalo, too, has been spurting of late with good effect, and that strong team is giving New York a close push. New York has reached the forties in victories. Chicago will close July a bad fifth, and it is the first time that club has been in that position so late in the season for several years past. Here is the record up to July 28, inclusive:

The tables in a number of the daily newspapers gave the lead to the Providence Club on July 26 and thereafter. The Boston Club, as we have said, led up to July 28. This will answer numberless inquiries we have received to-day, July 29, resulting from the error of the dailies, and which inquiries reached us too late for our Answers to Correspondents column of this issue.

Philadelphia vs. Providence.

The above-named clubs played July 26 in Philadelphia, Pa., the home-team then presenting Morton, a left-handed pitcher. He was very wild in his delivery, giving six men bases on balls, and this, together with five wild pitches, helped the visitors to an easy victory. Splendid stops by Farrell and Mulvey were the chief features. McClellan hurt his hand in the third inning and exchanged positions with Fogarty.

The game between these clubs July 28 resulted in another bad beating for the Philadelphians, although it was closely contested up to the fifth inning. The home-team had then made only one safe hit off Miller, but by bunching three singles in the fifth they scored three runs. In the sixth inning, however, the visitors scored four runs, three men being sent home on a two-bagger by Denny. This proved a lead that the home-team could not overcome. Radbourn pitched after the fifth inning and was not once hit safely.

Chicago vs. Detroit.

The thirteenth game between these clubs was played July 28 in Chicago, Ill. Bad errors by Geiss and Meinke gave the Chicagos three unearned runs in the first inning, and a base on balls, singles by Dalrymple and Kelly and a home-run by Anson yielded two more runs. The Detroits earned their three runs on home-runs by Wood and Scott and a single by Bennett. The home-runs were all hits over the short right-field fence.

Buffalo vs. Cleveland.

The Buffalos beat the Clevelands for the twelfth time July 28 in Buffalo, N. Y. The visitors seemed rattled from the start, were weak at the bat and worse in the field. Manager O'Rourke did nearly all the batting for the home-team, his five successive safe hits embracing a three-bagger. Force made two double-baggers.

New York vs. Boston.

A more astonished party than the Boston champions were on July 28 it would be hard to find. After their defeat of Saturday they placed their best nine in the field, with Buffinton in the box, and they felt sanguine of wiping out their previous defeat with a noteworthy victory. To their intense disgust, however, they had to put up with a "Chicago" whipping, besides which they made only three base-hits off Welch's strategic delivery, he being in fine trim and handsomely supported. This time the New York batsmen "got onto" Buffinton to the tune of four earned runs, Ward bearing off the palm at the bat and in base-running. It was the second time only that the Bostons had been "Chicagoed" out of sixty-six games.

EASTERN LEAGUE.

The Allentowns Reorganize.

The stockholders of the Allentown Club met night of July 25, and decided to disband. A telegram dated July 27 states that, upon promises made by the players meanwhile, the stockholders met again on the night of the 26th, rescinded the resolution of disbandment, and announced that they would reorganize the club with about all of the old players and some few new ones, and retain the old board of directors. The continuance of the organization would seem now to be dependent altogether upon the faithfulness with which the players keep their pledge of working together for the interests of the club.

The management of the latter, with their usual short-sightedness, placed Friel in the box, notwithstanding he was suffering from rheumatism in the shoulders, following him with Gagus, who has a nicely-developing boil, and substituting Meegan when the game was too old to accomplish anything.

Active vs. York.

This was another jug-handled game in a week conspicuous for one-sidedness. It was played in Reading, Pa., July 22. The striking-out was equal, 2 each; the bases on balls were 2 to 1 in favor of the Actives, and so were the earned runs. Dickie Pearce was umpire.

Allentown vs. Wilmington.

The home-club were decisively beaten July 22, although the score, that of innings sufficing, shows that the visitors did nearly one-half their run-getting in the ninth. The earned runs were 5 to 2 in favor of the winners. West umpired.

Other Games Played July 26.

The strong Wilmington team received their first whitewash this season in a championship game at the hands of the Domestic Club July 26, in Newark, N. J. The only and winning run of the contest was made after each club had been blanked in nine successive innings. Wiegand of the Domestics was given his base on called balls in the tenth inning, and was brought home by successive safe hits by Latham and McDonald, amid yells of applause. Say was badly hurt in the third inning by colliding with McDonald, who was running to second base. Say, although knocked down, held the ball and put out McDonald. He was removed in a carriage to his hotel, Munroe being substituted. Score by innings:

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

Washington Club.

A telegram as we go to press refutes the report that this organization was in prospect of disbandment. It attributes the report to unnamed parties who are accused of desiring to break up the club. The dispatch states, furthermore, that the players were all paid July 26, and that the arrearage did not extend back beyond the Western trip. The club's schedule will be played to the end. Moxley, it is understood, will retire from the presidency, and Harry Clay Ford will succeed him.

Indianapolis vs. Cincinnati.

The Cincinnatis secured their sixth successive victory over the Indianapolis July 22 on the latter club's grounds. Webber, an amateur, caught for the home-team, and proved a weak spot. The chief feature of the contest was Phillips' short-stopping, he putting out two men and making no fewer than ten assists.

St. Louis vs. Louisville.

These clubs met again July 22 in St. Louis, Mo. The home-team took the lead at the start and kept it to the end. Their fielding was poor, but the errors were scattering and cost only two runs, while they earned as many themselves by hard hitting, and added two runs on errors.

Athletic vs. Metropolitan.

The Athletics and Metropolitans met in Philadelphia, Pa., July 23, the champions then being welcomed home by fully five thousand people. The visitors made their runs principally on errors, Taylor pitching wildly and badly. The champions batted Lynch hard, but were not successful in bunching their hits. Esterbrook and Milligan did the best batting, the latter making a home-run.

The Metropolitans won again July 24, after an interesting contest. The visitors scored in every inning, leading off with two runs on three errors. Orr and Troy led in batting, each making a home-run, while Troy also got in a three-bagger. The home-team played loosely, Houck's short-stopping being the only redeeming feature.

For the fifth consecutive time the Mets defeated the Athletics July 25, a drizzling rain falling during the greater part of the game. The visitors in the first inning pounded Taylor for five safe hits, including three-baggers by Troy and Kennedy, and earned four out of the five runs then scored. Taylor was hit hard during the remainder of the game, Roseman, Orr and Esterbrook being credited with three-baggers. Corey of the Athletics made a home-run in the sixth inning. Kennedy made a wonderful running-catch, Roseman caught a ball over his head while running backward, Corey and Stovey made good running-catches of foul-fly hits, and Corey made a difficult stop with one hand.

St. Louis vs. Cincinnati.

The above-named clubs met for the first time this season July 23 in St. Louis, Mo. The Cincinnatis were shut out, only two of their team being able to bat Davis, who was almost perfectly supported in the field. Nicol scored the two runs credited to St. Louis, getting his base once on balls and once on a force-hit. Robert Ross, who succeeds Charles Daniels as official umpire, failed to make a favorable impression on his first appearance.

The above result was reversed July 24 after a contest marked by heavy batting. The home-team took the lead in the first inning and held it until the eighth, when the visitors went to the front. Notwithstanding the hard hitting on both sides, the fielding was good and at times brilliant.

Washington vs. Baltimore.

The first game between these clubs was played July 23 in Washington, D. C. Morgan broke a finger in the early part of the game and gave way to Hanna in the sixth inning. The contest was close and exciting, the home-team winning in the ninth inning on a fumble by Manning, safe hits by Olin and Hawkes, and a poor throw by Hawkes. Excellent catches were made by York and Fennelly. Trott's work behind the bat was very good.

The Columbus, by defeating the Toledo again July 22, took a slight lead in the championship race. Neither club batted well, but the Toledo hits were scattering and did them no good. The fielding of both clubs was perfect.

Baltimore vs. Athletic.

The above-named clubs met for the seventh time July 22 in Baltimore, Md., the Athletics then being credited with their fourth victory. The Baltimores bunched four safe hits in the first inning and scored three earned runs. Only two hits were afterwards made off Mathews, who struck out five men in succession in the fourth and fifth innings. The Baltimores fielded poorly. Milligan's clever catching and Stovey's batting were the chief features.

The Louisvilles secured their seventh successive victory over the Toledo Club July 23 in Toledo, O. The game was closely contested throughout, the visitors making the only and winning run on two-baggers by Wolf and Hecker in the eighth inning. Hecker and Mullane pitched very effectively.

St. Paul vs. Fort Wayne.

It required ten innings to bring the home-team in winners on July 21. The winning run was made in the midst of much excitement. Wood missed Carroll's third strike, Carroll stole second, and, by audaciously running half-way up to third, he rattled Brown, the Fort Wayne pitcher, who threw the ball to second. Carroll then ran towards third, and Toffling threw to Walmsley, who made a muff of the ball, and Ganzel ran home. Carroll contrived to get back to second, where he was left by O'Brien's striking out. Wood was hurt in the knee in this game, but pluckily kept to his post. Ganzel did the best playing for the home-team, retiring twelve men, assisting five times, making a two-base hit and a single and getting around twice.

July 22 the Fort Waynes defeated the home-team. The batting was light and the fielding thin. In the closing inning a sorry exhibition of temper was made by Brown of the St. Pauls. While he was at the bat, the ball apparently struck the handle and bounded off towards the pitcher, who put it to first and Brown was declared out. The latter protested that he had not struck the ball, and the umpire threatened to fine him if he did not acquiese in the decision. As soon as the inning had finished, Brown walked over to the umpire, and, after a few words, slapped him in the face with the palm of his hand. "It ended at that."

Minneapolis vs. Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids had things altogether their way July 21. Caruthers and Isaacson were the only ones of the home-team who hit for a base, and it did neither any good. Grand Rapids hammered Caruthers out of shape. Every one of the visitors except Madden and Houtz made a clean hit. Henry made a two-baser, and Eden struck terror to the hearts of the home-team by once knocking the ball over the fence and making a home-run, and by once putting in a two-baser.

Milwaukee vs. Muskegon.

The fielding in this game, played in Milwaukee July 21, was far below par. The batting was rather severe. After Arundel had been driven for five singles and two doubles in the first three innings he met with an accident, and Baldwin took his place. Knight was batted for ten singles and two doubles. Hogan, Falch and Broughton contributed materially to the loss of the game by their wild throws. The Milwaukees were short of Moynahan, their regular short-stop.

Heavy batting by Morrissey was the salient feature of the game of July 22, when Monahan was at short and the visitors went under:

Saginaw vs. Quincy.

In Quincy, Ill., July 21, the visitors almost dispensed with errors, making but one. Three of their half-dozen runs were earned. Clarkson put in a home-lick, and Whitney sounded a three-baser. On the side of the home-team, Black and Sweeney each made a two-base hit. The Quincys played well, malgre five errors, which let in three runs:

Quincy.....	2	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—4
Saginaw.....	0	0	0	0	4	0	0	1	0	1—6

Saginaw won the game of July 22:

Bay City vs. Peoria.

Peoria doubled the Bay Citys July 22, and then the latter club did in fact disband, it is telegraphed:

Keystone vs. Baltimore.

By bunching their hits in the first and fourth innings, the Baltimores beat the Keystones July 22 in Philadelphia, Pa. A one-handed catch of a liner by McCormick and a splendid stop by Easterday were features of the fielding. Hoover's three-bagger was the longest hit of the game.

The Keystones outfielded the Baltimores, but the latter did the best batting. McCormick's fielding and Lewis' batting were noteworthy.

The Cincinnatis, on their return home from an extended Eastern trip, met the St. Louis July 22, it being the ninth game of their series together. In the first and third innings the visitors batted Burns hard and earned four runs. After that the game was evenly played, each side fielding splendidly. Dunlap made a home-run and a double-bagger, and excelled in fielding. Barker was absent, and Kennedy, a local player, was substituted by the Cincinnatis.

Chicago vs. Kansas City.

By bunching hits in the second and third innings, the Kansas Citys defeated the Chicagos July 22 in Chicago, Ill. Householder hit the ball over the left-field fence in the seventh inning for a home-run. Krieg and Suck exchanged positions in the third inning. Berry by a fine catch made a double-play unassisted.

Good batting in the eighth inning helped the Chicagos to a victory over the Kansas Citys July 23. Atkinson, recently of the Athletics of Philadelphia, pitched for the Chicagos, and proved fairly effective. Gardner and Schoeneck did the batting for the home-team.

THE CALAIS REGATTA.

Conley Defeats Teemer.

TEN EYCK WINS THE CONSOLATION RACE.

The open scullers' regatta on the St. Croix River, at Calais, Me., took place July 24, 25, and furnished excellent sport, but was a failure financially. The result was a great surprise, as Teemer, who was a strong favorite, was quite badly beaten by Conley in the final heat, which seems to have been rowed on its merits; but the course is a very unfair one, and Conley's familiarity with the current and eddies enabled him to obtain an advantage that could not be overcome. The distance rowed was three miles, with one turn. Return:

Open scullers' race—First heat: John Teemer first, in 20m. 20s.; Albert Hamm second, by over a length; James H. Riley third and McCormick fourth. Teemer quickly showed himself to be far and away the best of the lot, leading by five lengths at the end of half a mile, the others being already practically out of the race. Teemer, pulling a long, clean stroke of thirty to the minute, was ten lengths ahead at the turn, and afterwards took matters very leisurely. Second heat: James A. Ten Eyck first, in 22m. 37s.; Peter H. Conley second, by eight lengths; E. Hamm third and Langley fourth. Hamm put all on at the start, and at the end of the first quarter-mile there was clear water between him and Conley, but in another quarter Hamm succeeded in pulling himself to pieces and was virtually out of the race. Conley then went to the front, but soon afterwards Ten Eyck spurted, assumed second place, and then gained slowly upon Conley, who being out of line with his stakeboat had to lose distance in getting to it, and this enabled Ten Eyck to get on nearly even terms at half distance. The latter finally laid his boat fairly level with his rival's and half a mile from the finish he passed to the fore, and Conley easing, ultimately won as above. The oarsmen had the first of the ebb-tide to contend against on the return journey. Third heat: Jacob Gaudaur first, in 22m. 52⅞s.; George W. Lee second, by six lengths; Vail third, G. H. Hosmer 0. Gaudaur, like Teemer in the first, had things his own way in this heat, leading all the way and winning as he pleased. Hosmer was second for considerably over two miles, but lack of condition then caused him to slow up and fall to the rear. Final heat: Conley first, in 23m 5⅞s.; Teemer second, by four lengths; Gaudaur third, by three lengths; Hamm fourth, by the same distance; Ten Eyck fifth. Lee did not finish. With a stroke of thirty-three Teemer, who was the favorite at five to three over the field, at once cut out the pace, leading by three lengths at the half-mile point, Gaudaur second, Hamm third, Lee fourth, Ten Eyck fifth and Conley last, the latter being then considered surely beaten. For the mile Conley hugged the English shore, rowing in slack water, but here he came out into the strong current, and, putting on steam, commenced to gain on the others, and before reaching the turning point had moved into second position, but a length in rear of the favorite. After turning he pulled back on the Canadian side, thus avoiding the three-mile current and strong wind which the others were contending against in midstream. His knowledge of the peculiarities of the course was further demonstrated by his subsequently crossing to the American side after entering upon the last mile, he having then secured a commanding advantage. After this it was an easy row for him. Teemer's hard pulling against tide and wind had taken a lot of strength out of him. He rowed a plucky, stern race, a spurt within three-quarters of a mile of the goal enabling him to draw a length upon the leader, but he could do no better. Teemer was very much chagrined because of his defeat by a man whom he had twice easily beaten in match-races this season, and he offered to row Conley again there and then for whatever sum the latter chose to name; but the winner was content to let well enough alone.

Consolation-race—Ten Eyck first, Lee second by nearly two lengths, Hamm third, McCormick fourth. Hosmer led for some distance, when he was passed by Riley, who at the quarter-mile point fouled a buoy and capsized, being rescued by the police-boat. This left Hosmer in the lead, with Ten Eyck next. The latter spurted and forged ahead at the half-mile, soon after which Hosmer withdrew. The hard work done by Hamm in the final heat of the other race told on him, and he was passed by Lee, no further change occurring.

AN EIGHT-OARED CREW composed of members of the Metropolitan Boat Club started on Sunday, July 27, to row around Manhattan Island in a brand-new $500 eight-oared barge. They had only rowed up the Harlem as far as Kings Bridge, however, when the boat became jammed in the bridge, and about eight feet of the bow of the boat was almost knocked off. This necessitated an abandonment of the trip, and the boys had a hard time getting the barge back to the house in the midst of a rain-storm.

GRAMERCY BOAT CLUB.—A single-scull gig-race was rowed on the Harlem River July 26 for a gold medal, presented by Charles Earwicker, president of the club. There were four contestants—Sutton and Schneider in the first heat, won by Sutton, and Wade and Worman in the second heat, won by Worman. The final heat is to be rowed later. The course was one mile, straightaway. Both races were closely contested.

THE steam-yacht Falcon arrived at St. John, N. B., July 26, with her owner, R. T. Bush.

ROSS vs. TEEMER.

THE STAKE-MONEY ALL UP.

The match-race for $2,000 between Wallace Ross and John Teemer, for one thousand dollars a side and the supremacy among scullers at present in America, is to come off, weather and water permitting, at Oak Point, this city, on Saturday next, Aug. 2, between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock P. M. The excellent form shown by the Pennsylvanian in the events wherein he has participated this season and the brilliant achievements of Ross in the past have naturally impressed upon the public mind the belief that the struggle between these giants with the sculls will be of a kind to put fully to the test their exceptional powers, and therefore insure to the spectators a race worth a long journey to witness. The final deposit, five hundred dollars from each, was posted with THE CLIPPER July 26, making the entire amount of the stakes now in our hands. On the 28th James Pilkington for Ross and Eph Morris, ex-champion, for Teemer, met at our office and agreed upon Barney Biglin, the well-known ex-oarsman and politician, for the position of referee. The distance to be rowed is four miles, with a turn, starting from and returning to a point opposite to the grand-stand. Ross has been in steady training at the Point, and we have heard very favorable reports of his rowing. Teemer arrived July 27, and has been familiarizing himself with the course.

NORTHWESTERN AMATEUR REGATTA.

Special Report for The N. Y. Clipper.

ST. CLAIR, Mich., July 23, 1884.

The sixteenth annual regatta of the Northwestern Amateur Boating Association opened to-day with a large crowd in attendance. Excursion boats and trains from Detroit, Port Huron and other points came in loaded to their fullest capacity in the forenoon. About half-past ten o'clock the weather cleared, and the sun came out in full force. All the entered crews were on hand. The Minnesota crew of St. Paul labor under the disadvantage of not having their racing-boat here, it having been broken in their recent race on the Mississippi, where they were run down by a tug. All races for this regatta are one mile up-stream and return with the current, except the free-for-all four-oared race. The course is in a swift current, which, it is claimed, runs at the rate of two miles per hour. The crew having position No. 1, which is on the American side, has the best course.

The first race of the afternoon was for senior pairs, the Excelsiors of Detroit—consisting of F. D. Standish and Ed. Telfer—having position No. 1, and the Ariels of Newark, N. J.—F. Freeman and John Weldon—position No. 2, competing. The start was made on time, with the wind blowing rather more than moderately from the west or American shore. The Excelsiors caught the water first and obtained a half-length the best of the start, both crews hugging the American shore, the Excelsiors pulling a 41-stroke, and the Ariels a 37. At the half-mile point, the Excelsiors had not increased their lead, and it seemed to be a close race, when the Excelsiors made a spurt, and forged two boat-lengths ahead. They kept increasing their lead, and turned four lengths ahead. The Ariels made a poor turn, and lost from six to eight lengths. They then stopped rowing and gave up the race, the Excelsiors crossing the finish-line in 14m. 27s.

The second race started on time, and was for senior four-oars. The starters were the Chathams of Chatham, Ont., position No. 1; Wah-wah-tahsees of Ecorse, Mich., No. 2; and the Minnesotas of St. Paul, Minn., No. 3. The Chathams led off by half a length, the Wah-wah-tahsees second and the Minnesotas third. These relative positions were maintained to the turn, where the Ecorse was a close second and the Minnesotas a poor third. The latter virtually gave up the race after turning. After pulling about one-quarter of a mile from the turn the Ecorse four shot ahead with a 52-stroke, and had obtained a good lead, with the race in their hands, when poor steering lost it. The Chatham crew out-generaled the Ecorse boys by pulling out into the current, and thus getting the benefit of the fast water. The Chathams crossed the finish line in 12m. 52s.; Wah-wah-tahsee second, in 13m. 2s.

The next race was for junior doubles, the entries being the Farraguts of Chicago, position No. 1; Chathams of Ontario, No. 2; and the Goguacs of Battle Creek, Mich., No. 3. The Farraguts obtained the lead at the start, with the Chathams and Gognacs bow-and-bow. The Chathams suddenly stopped rowing, thus leaving only two in the race, which was entirely in the hands of the Farraguts. The Farraguts were a full quarter of a mile ahead of the Goguacs when the latter straightened away on the return, and the former crossed the finish-line in 14m. 27s., the Goguacs a poor second.

The next race was for four-oared gigs. There were two entries, the Grand Ledge crew of Grand Ledge, Mich., position No. 1, and the Excelsiors of Detroit, No. 2. The Excelsiors caught water first and obtained a slight lead, which they maintained almost to the turn, when the Grand Ledge crew went ahead and turned first. The Excelsiors soon made good their loss and shot ahead, with the Grand Ledge crew pulling bravely for first place, but they were unable to again secure it, the Excelsiors crossing the line first in 14m. The Grand Ledge crew came in a close and hard-working second.

The last race of the day was for senior single-sculls, with two starters as follows: J. J. Donoghue, Port Huron, position No. 1, and Wm. Plass, Detroit, No. 2. It was a good race for half a mile, when Plass obtained a lead and kept it to the turn, when Donoghue stopped rowing entirely.

This closed the first day of the races, which were noted for promptness, but devoid of the enthusiasm usually exhibited at former Northwestern regattas. No pool-selling was allowed on the grounds, nor in the city; consequently but little money changed hands on the races.

The weather on this the second day, July 24, was cloudy and occasionally misty, but by three o'clock the course was in better shape than yesterday, being far smoother. The races started on time. The first, for senior double-sculls, contained three starters—the Chathams of Chatham, Ont. (position No. 1); the Torontos of Toronto, Canada (position No. 2), and the Farraguts of Chicago, Ill. (position No. 3). All started together, but the Chathams, after pulling about sixty rods up to the boat-house, quit their rowing and pulled out. The race between the Torontos and Farraguts was neck-and-neck to the turn, which the Torontos succeeded in rounding first. First the Torontos were afterwards ahead, and next the Farraguts. The race seemed to be within the grasp of the Farraguts, when, within ten rods of the finish, the Torontos made a bold spurt, and shot ahead, winning in 15m. 51s.

The next race, for junior four-oared shells, contained four starters—the Port Huron crew of Port Huron, Mich. (position No. 1); the Excelsiors of Detroit, Mich. (position No. 2); the Goguacs of Battle Creek, Mich. (position No. 3), and the Centennials of Detroit, Mich. (position No. 4). A good start was obtained, but the Port Huron crew having the best water (near the American shore) shot ahead and kept increasing the lead to the turn. The other three crews were pulling bravely for second place when the Centennials, having the outside course, suddenly eased up and obtained inside position by passing astern of the other boats. They soon succeeded in getting second place, and thus the racers became strung out into single file. The Port Hurons crossed the finish-line winners in 12m. 44⅝s. The Centennials crossed second; time not given. The other two crews were virtually out of the race.

The next race, junior single-sculls, contained four starters—W. E. Rispin of Chatham, Ont. (position No. 1); W. F. Fowler of Chicago (position No. 2), John Parker of Detroit, Mich. (position No. 3), and Mathew Ryan (position No. 4). Fowler did not start, as he had rowed in the double-scull race just an hour before. Ryan soon obtained the lead and Parker second place. This relative position was kept throughout, Ryan finishing in 14m. 50s. Rispin was a quarter of a mile behind Parker. The judges, however, decided that Ryan had fouled Parker, and gave the race to the latter man, disqualifying Ryan. During this race it commenced to rain and blow, but not a person of the immense crowd along the shore moved from his position.

The next race, was free for all four oars, one and one-half miles, straightaway, with the current. There were three entries and starters—the Excelsiors of Detroit, Mich. (position No. 1); the Minnesotas of St. Paul, Minn. (position No. 2), and the Wah-wah-tahsees of Ecorse, Mich. (position No. 3). Although there was a slight mist at the time of starting, yet the water had calmed and was in the best shape of the day when the signal was given to go. All three crews caught the water together. The Excelsiors shot ahead at first, but the Ecorse crew soon secured first place, and the Minnesotas second, with the Excelsiors third. The Ecorse crew kept the lead, and crossed the finish-line winners in 6m. 57⅝s. The Minnesotas were a very close second. This was a hard-earned race for the Ecorse crew, and was very loudly applauded by the continuous whistling of the twenty steamboats on the river. The Ecorse crew consist of four brothers (Frenchmen), who have a short, quick stroke, and are gentlemanly in their demeanor. They were unheard of before this race, but will hereafter be remembered in aquatic circles, as it is claimed the time made by them to-day is the fastest ever made by an amateur four-oared crew.

The day closed with a steam-yacht race. The Lillie, owned by Mr. Brush of Detroit; the Sigma, owned by M. S. Smith of Detroit; and the Permelia, owned by Mark Hopkins of St. Clair, Mich., were the contestants. The distance was six miles down stream. The Lillie was given 4m. 12s., and the Sigma 1m. 18s. ahead of the Permelia. The Lillie, having such a start, won the race, with the Sigma second and Permelia third. The Sigma made the six miles in 20m.

There was a meeting of the officers and members of the N. W. A. B. Association held this morning, at which the following members of the executive board were elected: Geo. H. Lesher, Emmet Streeter, F. Linn and J. F. Lewis. The treasurer's report was gratifying, showing a balance on hand of $1,300. The meeting was largely attended by representatives of the nineteen different clubs belonging to the association. After transacting the regular business of the meeting, it adjourned to meet at the call of the secretary.

Thus closes the sixteenth annual regatta of this association, which has been a success from the beginning. President French and Secretary Lesher are commended for their untiring zeal in making each succeeding regatta more successful than former ones. The badges awarded to the winners were made by M. S. Smith & Co. of Detroit. The prizes were presented and all the oarsmen left for home to-night.

THE LEARY BADGE.

Weather and water-conditions were alike favorable for shell-rowing on the Harlem River on Saturday afternoon, July 26, and, as numerous entries had been made for the open amateur scullers' race for an elegant gold badge presented by the veteran professional, Denny Leary, the affair proved a gratifying success and furnished the means of genuine enjoyment to the large number of devotees of rowing who witnessed it. The trial-heats were over a course of half a mile, and the final less than two miles, with a turn. First heat: R. H. Bryon, Atalanta B. C., first, in 3m. 24⅝s.; Isaac Maas, Nonpareil B. C., second; George M. Young, Atalanta B. C., 0; Wm. Mulcare, Metropolitan B. C., 0; J. Halcot, Nautilus B. C., 0. Second heat: Robert Schile, Metropolitan B. C., first, in 3m. 20⅜s.; Thomas Roach, Nautilus B. C., second; Thomas Woods, Friendship B. C., third. Final heat: Schile first, in 13m. 24⅛s.; Roach second, by several lengths; Bryon third and Maas fourth. This was a good race to the turn, where Roach began to tire, leaving Schile to win easily. Referee, James McCartney.

THE SCRANTON CUP.—At ten o'clock on the morning of July 26, the Wild Pigeon (winner), Vixen, Ceres, Rajah and Sea Belle, yachts and cutters of the New Haven Club, started in competition for a cup presented by Com. C. N. Scranton. Com. J. C. Rhodes, G. M. Crapo and Walter R. Myrick of the New Bedford Yacht Club acted as judges. The course was fifteen miles, from Eleven-foot Bank round Wilkes Ledge and West Island Ledge, thence to the starting-point. The fleet of the New Haven Club, accompanied by a portion of the New Bedford squadron, arrived at Onset Bay, Mass., July 26, and at night were given a reception at the skating-rink. The cruise ended and the fleet disbanded at Onset 28.

AN OPEN SWEEPSTAKES RACE for catrigged yachts over 23ft. and under 25ft. in length, distance ten miles to windward and return from Pagoda Point, near the entrance to Long Island Sound, has been arranged by the Knickerbocker Yacht Club. It is to be sailed on Wednesday, Aug. 13, at 11 A. M. The stakes are $50 each, h. f., and the amount and number of cash prizes will depend on the number of entries received. W. R. Morse, P. O. Box 883, N. Y. City, will receive all entries, the list closing at 10 A. M. Aug. 7. After the start no taking in or booming out of ballast will be allowed, and yachts may carry what crews they please, but must bring back the same persons they started with.

SOUTHERN AND MOBILE.—A regatta was held July 20 by the Southern Club of New Orleans, La., and the Mobile (Ala.) Club at Point Clear. The course was triangular in shape, five miles around, and was sailed over three times. The yachts finished in the following order: Zoe, Virginia, Ruby, Wanderer, Nellie, Never Tell and Pearce Jr. There was but five seconds difference in the time of arrival of the two leading boats. A supper at the Grand Hotel wound up proceedings in a very enjoyable manner. On the preceding evening a ball was given in the Louisiana Pavilion in honor of the amateur blue-jackets.

CHAMPIONSHIP SWIM.—The fourth annual competition for the amateur half-mile swimming championship of Great Britain and prizes presented by the Swimming Association came off at the Welsh Harp, London, Eng., July 12. The course was straightaway, the competitors more than usually numerous, and the result as follows: G. Bell first, in 14m. 35½s.; F. W. Moses second, in 14m. 46s.; D. Ainsworth and T. Smith a dead-heat for third place, in 14m. 50s. Referee, Dr. H. J. Barron; timer, R. Watson.

ATLANTIC YACHT CLUB.—The rendezvous was Norwalk Harbor Islands, Ct., July 26. That afternoon the fleet, comprising four schooners and eight sloops, sailed for Black Rock, and they go thence to New London, Greenport, Stonington, Newport (July 31), and New Bedford, Mass., where the cruise is likely to end.

THE DETROIT (MICH.) YACHT CLUB sailed a ten-mile race July 21, with this result: Second class—Letter B first, in 1h. 35m. 30s.; Corsair second and Can't Say third. Third class—Truant first.

RACE FOR JUNIORS.—The success attending the race which took place on the Harlem River July 26 has induced the promoter of that event, Denny Leary, to offer a prize for another amateur race, open to all juniors in the State, and to be rowed in gigs on the afternoon of Aug. 16. The distance will be the same as in the race of the 26th, and entries can be made to Dennis Leary, at "The Jolly Cop," 163d street and Harlem River.

THE Swimming Association of Great Britain, at a meeting July 14, resolved "that all swimming championships must be held under S. A. G. B. rules, and that any person or persons competing at unrecognized championships will render themselves liable to disqualification or suspension." This resolution will not affect local races styled championships held under S. A. G. B. laws.

SYLVIE GOOKIN, the oarsman, added another feather to his cap when he successfully met and conquered the magnetic power of Miss Hurst at the Globe Theatre, Boston, last week. A number of the athletic graduates of Harvard and members of clubs were vanquished by the lady.

THE POTOMAC-RIVER REGATTA takes place July 31 at Washington, D. C., and promises to be a success. Entries from clubs of other cities are not numerous, a fact thought to be mainly due to the refusal of railroad companies to reduce fares or carry boats free.

THE FINAL RACE of the series for the yacht suit was rowed at Waltham, Mass., July 26, and won by F. E. Peters, defeating Thomas Cotter, who did not complete the two miles, covered by the winner in 15m. 18s.

"TOMMY" ROACH, the youthful sculler of the Nautilus Club, won golden opinions from older oarsmen by the plucky manner in which he stuck to Schile, as well as the excellence of his oarsmanship, in the race on the Harlem River July 26. With more age and strength to back up his skill and grit, he will yet make his mark.

NEW RECORD.—The steamer Louisiana arrived at her wharf in New Orleans, La., at 4.30 A. M. July 25, the time of her passage from New York being 5 days 11 hours, surpassing all former records.

SONS OF ST. GEORGE.

About eight thousand persons attended the sixth annual sports of the Heart of Oak, Anglo-Saxon, Commonwealth and Ivanhoe Lodges, Sons of St. George, held at Ridgewood Park, Brooklyn, L. I., July 28. A return follows:

One-mile walk, open to amateurs—G. Sterrat first, in 7m. 49⅛s.; J.

THE AMERICAN TEAM ABROAD.

Particulars of the races engaged in by Messrs. Myers, Murray, Fredricks and Waldron at Nottingham, Eng., July 12, are given below.

One-hundred-and-fifty-yards run—J. M. Cowie, S. L. H., first, in 15⅗s.; A. Waldron, Manhattan A. C., second, by nearly four yards; W. Lock, S. L. H., third.

Fifteen-hundred-yards run—Wm. Snook, Moseley H., first; H. E. Fredricks, Manhattan A. C., second; E. C. Carter, M. H., third; and A. H. Davies, London A. C., fourth. Fredricks, on the inside, made the running in front of Snook until settling down, when the latter assumed the lead, and Carter ran into the second place. After half a lap, Fredricks passed Carter, and drew on the heels of the Moseley champion. A lap having been run, three yards would have coupled the quartet, Snook having an advantage on the inside. Fredricks was endeavoring to wait on Snook, but when the pinch came the latter sprinted, and won as he liked by sixteen yards; eight yards divided the second and third, and six yards the third and fourth. Time for the winner, 3m. 46⅗s.; Fredricks, 3m. 48⅗s.

Six-hundred-yards run—L. E. Myers, Manhattan A. C., first; F. S. Howard, S. L. H., second; W. Lock, S. L. H., third. Myers had the inside, and Lock dashed off in front, with Howard and the American close up. On rounding the second turn Myers passed the two leaders, and Howard superseded Lock. At the final turn Myers extended himself, and won by a dozen yards; ten yards separated the second and third. Time, 1m. 13⅗s.; Howard, 1m. 15⅕s.

Three-miles walking race—F. P. Murray, Williamsburg A. C., first; J. Jervis, Liverpool, second; H. Whyatt, Notts Forest F. C., third. Whyatt went away with a clear lead of Murray, and before half a lap had been traversed was fully ten yards in front. On concluding the first lap Murray closed up with Whyatt, who subsequently tired and retired. Meanwhile Jervis continued to plod on, and Whyatt in the fourth circuit reappeared, and struggled with him for second honors. He, however, was hopelessly beaten in the fifth round. He was suffering from a disabled foot. Jervis could never extend Murray, who achieved victory by fully eighty yards, in 22m. 40s. The winner completed the first mile in 7m. 1s., and the second in 14m. 53⅗s.

The fourth of the series was decided at the Aston Lower Grounds, Birmingham, July 14, when the attendance manifested a marked decrease on previous meetings, for there were scarcely a thousand persons on the grounds. In point of sport the meeting proved a dead frost, but of course the match between George and Fredricks was looked upon with considerable interest, although the Englishmen did not appear to relish George's defeat. The seventy-five-yards scratch-race only brought out three runners, but Waldron was forced to succumb to both Ritchie and Livesey, who ran in good form. The 1,200yds. scratch-race resolved itself into a match between Myers and Snook. The latter ran in a thoroughly consistent manner, but he was no match for the American when the final struggle came. Great enthusiasm was manifested when it was observed that no less than four of the English athletes had fairly beaten Fredricks in the 2,000yds. scratch-race. The one-mile scratch-walk was landed very easily by Murray.

One-hundred-yards match—H. E. Fredricks, Manhattan A. C., first; W. G. George, Moseley Harriers, second. For the first thirty yards the pair ran close together. Opposite the refreshment stand Fredricks commenced to forge ahead, and about twenty yards from home he was nearly half a yard in advance of the English champion. Continuing at a good pace he won by a foot. Time 11s.

Seventy-five-yards scratch-race—F. T. Ritchie, Moseley Harriers, first; W. Livesey, Moseley Harriers, second; A. Waldron, Manhattan A. C., third. Although Waldron had a little the best of the start, Ritchie was not long in getting alongside him, and he and Livesey quickly came away and left Waldron in the rear. Ritchie ultimately won by two yards; while a yard separated the second and third. Time, 7⅘s.

One-thousand-two-hundred-yards scratch-race—L. E. Myers, Manhattan A. C., first; W. Snook, Moseley Harriers, second. Snook quickly took up the running, and, settling down a yard in front of his opponent, the pair so ran until entering the side straight, when Myers made his first effort. Snook, however, quickly left him behind, but, upon Myers making his final challenge, Snook had no possible chance with him, and the American sprinted home a winner by ten yards, Snook having eased on finding himself beaten. Time, 2m. 58s.

Two-thousand-yards scratch-race—J. E. Hickman, Moseley Harriers, first; G. Slynn, Birchfield Harriers, second; W. Darlington, Moseley Harriers, third; A. H. Davies, L. A. C., fourth; H. E. Fredricks, Manhattan A. C., 0; O. W. Haydon, Moseley Harriers, 0; T. Thornton, Birchfield Harriers, 0. After going about twenty yards Darlington took up the running, followed round by Thornton and Fredricks. No alteration took place until the half distance, when Hickman was leading Slynn, Darlington, Thornton, Fredricks, Davies and Haydon. In the last lap Fredricks got up to the front, but was speedily passed by his English opponents, and when lying last he retired. Finally Hickman won by twelve yards; three yards divided the second and third. Time, 5m. 15⅘s.

One-mile scratch-walk—F. P. Murray, Williamsburg A. C., first; J. Jervis, Liverpool, second; H. Webster, New Ferry C. C., third; D. L. Morgan, Acock's Green C. C., 0. Webster led for a lap, having Murray for his immediate companion, with Jervis and Morgan next. The latter fell out after going a lap, and Murray took the lead. Retaining his lead, he eventually won by twenty yards. After going about half-way Jervis gave Webster the go-by, and ultimately beat him for second place by four yards. Time, 6m. 47s.

LONDON, July 27.—The failure of the Americans to take part in the contests at the joint meeting of the South London Harriers and the Manhattan Club of New York in Liverpool yesterday was not due to the conduct of Myers entirely. Despite the threatening weather, a great crowd had assembled, drawn mainly by the fame of Myers' recent achievements in England, and the attendants expected to see him again lower the record, as he has done twice already in his marvelous runs here. At the time appointed for the runs, however, a heavy rain fell and spoiled the track for first-class performances. The Harriers, rather than disappoint the crowd, ordered the minor contests run off, but left it to the Americans to decide whether or not the principal events should be undertaken. Myers was willing to run, but the majority of the Americans opposed this, and in falling in with their judgment Myers was supported by both Fredricks and Murray. They will compete at Stonebridge to-morrow and in London Aug. 4, sailing for home Aug. 9 in the Servia.

MEEK BEATS RECORD TIME.

He Walks Four Miles in 29m. 10s.

W. H. Meek of the Westside A. C. of this city was one of the contestants in the four-mile open-handicap walk at the second Summer meeting of the London Athletic Club July 12, and he proved the winner, making the fastest amateur time on record. The Sporting Life published the appended account:

Four-mile walking handicap (open)—W. H. Meek, Westside A. C., New York, scratch, first; W. A. S. Parrott, L. A. C., 3m. 20s. start, second. Also started: F. Watson, L. A. C., 1m. 50s.; R. Coombes, L. A. C., 2m.; A. J. Ockelford, Orion Gymnasium, 2m. 10s.; H. W. Jaques, Brunswick H., 2m. 40s.; W. T. A. Beare, Clapton B., 3m. 10s.; G. P. Manson, Blackheath H., 3m. 30s.; R. Wilkins, L. A. C., 3m. 50s.; H. Wright, Ranelagh H., 4m. 30s.; J. H. Murphy, Highgate H., 1m. 30s. (disq.); J. W. Perrott, S. L. H., 4m. 10s. (disq.). Wright did not maintain the position of leader for any great length of time, being passed by Perrott, Parrott and Wilkins before the first mile was completed. The men maintained much the same order up to the finish of the second mile, when Perrott still led, followed by Parrott, Wilkins, Ockelford and Murphy, Meek having gone sixth. The latter, who started away with scrupulous fairness, in strong contrast to the majority of the competitors, continued to gain fast, and, passing Murphy down the straight for the end of the third mile, he went on in pursuit of the leaders, Perrott and Parrott, Wilkins having retired. Entering the fourteenth lap, the American was barely a hundred yards in the rear, and he put on a brilliant spurt and got over the ground at such a rate—although perfectly fair—that he succeeded in knocking off the difference before the three miles and a half were completed and was thus in front at half a mile from the finish. Keeping on the move with a long, free stride, Meek now went for the record (29m. 29s.), and, finishing up with a grand spurt for almost the whole of the last lap, he eventually completed the distance an easy winner by just upon 150yds. in the marvellous time of 29m. 10s., thus beating the record by no fewer than 19s.

D. M. DORGHERTY advertises that he would like to hear from wrestlers in regard to a business engagement.

CLAN-NA-GAEL GAMES.

This Hibernian Society held their annual picnic and games in the Empire City Coliseum (old Jones' Wood) July 23. The principal winner was H. M. Johnson, the well-known professional sprinter, who by his performances proved himself an excellent all-around athlete, and rather astonished beholders by his display of muscle and proficiency in jumping and handling heavy weights. He won the hundred-yards run in 10s., the 56lb weight throw with 26ft. 6½in., the 16lb hammer throw with the rather poor cast of 63ft. 3in., and the standing high-jump with 4ft. 7in. As the foot-race was run downhill and the ground on which the other events were decided was not level, of course these performances do not constitute records. It is probable, however, that Johnson will ere long excel existing records at throwing the 56lb weight, at least. J. C. Hurner was unopposed in the running long-jump, covering 16ft. 1in. T. C. Herbert won the one-hour run—C. Price second—and also the three-mile race—P. Heggleman second. R. McCausland captured the two-mile amateur walk and Delaney the two-mile run.

GEORGE FAILS.

A cable dispatch states that on July 28 W. G. George made an attempt in London, Eng., to beat Deerfoot's running record for one hour, 11 miles 970yds. There was an immense crowd present. George went to the mark in fine condition, and ran with great confidence and strength. He finished fresh and with plenty of wind, but fell short of Deerfoot's distance by thirty-eight yards, having accomplished but eleven miles and 932yds. George, it is said, was surprised at the result, having supposed that he had slightly exceeded the record. He is reported determined to make another essay as soon as he can recuperate and re-train.

NOT THAT MAN.—It appears from detailed reports since received that we were misinformed in regard to L. E. Myers having beaten W. G. George in a 1,200 yards level race at Birmingham, Eng., July 14. It was Wm. Snook of the same club who succumbed to the speed of the American flyer on that occasion. The proposed match between Myers and George, to include three races, was not arranged, the latter not fancying the 880 yards, 1,000 yards and 1,200 yards races arranged by H. Oliver and the South London Harriers, as part of the Birmingham programme, to enable them to meet on equal terms, and Myers declining to accede to George's proposal for a series of races at 1,000 yards, 1,200 and 1,320 yards.

A MEETING of the executive committee of the National Association of Amateur Athletes was held July 21, at which E. Van Tambacht was elected vice-president, F. G. Janssen secretary and W. C. Wilmer treasurer. The championship meeting will be held on the grounds of the Williamsburg A. C.

THOMAS ORR won the twelve-hour go-as-you-please race, open to the State of Georgia, at Atlanta July 25. It was rumored there that the winner's real name is COX, and that he has figured in numerous pedestrian contests in the North. Shouldn't wonder.

W. MATHIAS proved too fleet of foot for V. S. Johnston in a ninety-eight-yard spin, for fifty dollars, at New Philadelphia, O., July 22. He came in five feet ahead in 10⅘s.

JAMES QUIRK of Brantford and Fitzgerald of Toronto, under the aliases of Campbell and Grace, ran one hundred yards at Belleville, Ont., July 22, the former winning in 10⅕s.

THOMAS TATES, conceded two yards, was the victor in a one-hundred-yards match for $200 with Wm. Eisenhower at Echo Park, Philadelphia, July 28. He won by a yard in 11s.

IN A 100-yards race at South Framingham, Mass., July 26, Patrick H. Delee of Hopkinton beat Phillip McGowan of South Framingham.

THOMAS HARRINGTON of Wakefield won a five-mile race at Stoneham, Mass., July 22, beating George Dean and several others. Time, 21m. 45s.

JOHN RUDDIMAN of Cold Spring, on the Hudson, and Thomas Smith of Brooklyn are matched to run four miles at the former place on Saturday, Aug. 2, at 6 P. M. Alf. Badger is up there.

FISH AND FISHERS.

THE Government steamer Albatross on July 24 arrived at Newport, R. I., from Norfolk, Va., having on board a large number of fish experts, who since her departure from Norfolk July 19 have been making observations regarding the habits of fish found in the waters along the northern end of the Gulf Stream. Some important discoveries have been made during the cruise. The Albatross was to have left 25 and proceeded to the southward of Block Island to watch the movements of mackerel and menhaden. Subsequently she will proceed to the eastward and continue observations as far as No Man's Land.

THE trout-fishing season has been dull.

FISHERMEN who are cursing their luck this year attribute it in a large measure to the unusual number of actors, variety and legitimate, who are bobbing for what they can get, their own business having come to an end earlier this year than is its wont. Many of these actors, in their inexperience, have been using marshmallows or ice-cream for bait, and that has vitiated the normal appetite of the average fish.

CRABBING PARTIES are "all the go" at Pleasant Bay, N. J., this season.

FISHERMEN who are cursing their luck this year BLACK BASS are plentiful in the Potomac River, and go for either fly or live bait, but at Greenwood Lake, N. Y., the bass scorn the fly and "lay" for live bait.

PROBABLY the largest stingaree ever caught on the Jersey coast was hauled up near Seaville, July 23. It was five feet across the back, and weighed 300lb.

PICKEREL and muscalonge have so gorged themselves with the dead alewives (herring) floating in the St. Lawrence River that they refuse to bite, and guests and hotel-keepers among the Thousand Islands are alike sad-eyed.

F. H. CHAPPELL of New London, Ct., was recently twenty-five minutes in landing a trout in Lower Richardson Lake. It weighed upwards of eight pounds, and was twenty-seven inches long.

SALMON-FISHING is poor all over the North.

THE shark is savagely playing sad havoc with fishing interests all along the western coast of England. He is paying particular attention to mackerel.

COL. E. R. ABBOTT is credited with having caught the first striped bass of the season in this vicinity—a ten-pound-six-ounce beauty taken from Beach Lawn dock, Glen Island.

THE RING.

BURKE OUTBOXES CLEARY.

Two Referees Standing Each Other Off.

Several hundred persons gathered in Irving Hall, this city, July 28, to witness the announced glove-contest of four rounds, Queensberry rules, for divided gate-receipts, between Jack Burke of England and Mike Cleary. There was room in the hall for many more, and many more would probably have been present had there not been a lingering suspicion in the minds of patrons of these entertainments that the meeting was not to be "for blood," and that it would be a contest in name only. People who go to these places nowadays want to see slogging, not fancy sparring; therefore, the sports assembled in Irving Hall were disappointed by the tameness of the show. It was far from being an encounter which served to show the hitting-power and courage of the principals. It did, however, clearly demonstrate the fact that Burke is by long odds the cleverer boxer of the twain. He shaped finely, hit straight and quickly, and proved a master in evasion. He hit Cleary when and where he pleased, generally about the face and head, seldom using the right hand, except to throw off Cleary's counters, and fairly smothering the latter with his left duke alone. The display made by him was very satisfactory indeed, and gained him many friends, among them a number whom Cleary lost by the very indifferent showing made by him—even worse than upon the occasion of his meeting with Klirain in Madison square Garden. His friends looked in vain for "that right-hand knock-out blow of Mike's," all attempts in that direction being easily balked by his clever adversary, although the latter did not try to do any damage. Cleary seemed to entertain a wholesome dread of the smaller man before him, or else, even if there had been a previous understanding regarding the nature of the set-to, he would at least have tried to prevent the Englishman from taking such liberties with him. If it was intended to be a sparring match for points, then Burke won with lots to spare; but the farce of having two referees was a feature of the show, and while one of the officials, E. Plummer, thus rendered his decision, and was loudly applauded, the other, W. C. McClellan, seemingly acting under orders from headquarters, declared the blows equal, and the affair a draw, which gained for him a round of hisses.

OFFHAND MILL.

The motley crowd of sports who journeyed to Harry Hill's place, Flushing Bay, early on July 26, in expectation of witnessing the long-deferred fight between Jack Dempsey and George Fulljames, and were disappointed (for no good and sufficient reason, as both principals were on hand), got up an impromptu fight, for a subscribed purse, between Jack Howard and Tom Donnelly, who had been indulging in a growl, and were in humor for punching each other. They fought on turf, in the ring which had been erected for the use of the disobliging Fulljames and Dempsey, the Queensberry rules governing the encounter, which was unmarked by scientific boxing, but was full of downright hard fighting. For the first dozen rounds Donnelly held a strong lead, but then he fell off, while Howard stuck gamely to his work, and at the end of the fifteenth round was rewarded for his pluck by seeing the sponge go up from Tom's corner. The latter's right hand was stated to have been disabled by a sprain. Howard was seconded by Bill Brown and Frank Crysler, Donnelly by Al. Powers and W. Madden of Greenpoint. Referee, W. O'Brien.

AMATEUR BOXING TOURNAMENT.

Billy Madden, proprietor of Madden's Athletic Hall, 120 East Thirteenth street, announces that he will give gold medals of elegant design to the winners of boxing competitions at different weights, to take place at his sporting resort. The competitions are open to all amateurs, no entrance-fee being charged, and will be held as follows: Lightweights, not over 140lb, Aug. 4, at 9.15 P. M.; middleweights, not over 158lb, Aug. 11, at 9.15 P. M.; heavyweights, unlimited, Aug. 18, at 9.15 P. M. The boxing will be governed by the rules framed for Madden's professional boxing tournament in England, at which the championship was won by Charles Mitchell. With the latter as referee and Madden as manager the affair is in capable hands and ought to prove successful. Amateurs desiring to compete should send in their entries, at the hall mentioned, as soon as possible. Sparring bouts between professionals of reputation will add to the enjoyment of the lovers of fistic sport.

A FARCE IN TROY, N. Y.

A so-called "glove-fight to the finish" took place in the Grand Central Theatre, July 25, between "Terror" Egan of Troy and John Hughes, "the dangerous blacksmith," of New York. Four alleged rounds, of about two minutes each, were had, during which not the slightest particle of science was shown by either man. The affray was a series of mauls, slugs, trips, wrestling, closing and alleged biting and kicking that would have better befitted the tow-path of the raging Erie Canal. There were some twenty assistants and friends of the contestants permitted to mingle in the scrimmage, and half a dozen policemen could not enforce stage decorum. Both men were tired out, accomplishing nothing, when the "referee" declared the fight a draw, amid groans and hisses.

WON'T ALLOW GLOVE-FIGHTS.—Says a press telegram from Trenton, N. J., July 28: "Mayor Donnelly to-day directed Chief McChesney to inform the proprietors of halls and similar places of amusement that they would be prosecuted if they permitted any fight or glove-contest on their premises. The City Solicitor says the statute of the State authorizes the prohibition of public fights of any kind. The Mayor's order will prevent the coming fight between Caffrey and Morrissy that was to have taken place in this city. It is said the pugilists will go over into Bucks County, Pa., and try to evade the authorities there."

WATERS DEFEATS BRENNAN.—A hard-glove fight, Queensberry rules, for two hundred dollars, came off on Thursday morning, July 24, at a spot on Long Island, not far from the seashore. The principals were Luke Waters of Williamsburg and Jack Brennan of the metropolis, and the former won in the fifth round by putting his adversary to sleep. The select party of sports who received the "office" witnessed quite an interesting battle.

SCULLION KNOCKED OUT.—Bob Caffry, hailing from Bucks County, Pa., proved too good a slugger for Pat Scullion of Trenton, N. J., in a boxing match with soft gloves in Turner Hall, that city, July 24. A right-hander on the jaw did the business in the third round. They fought for fifty dollars, Queensberry rules, the understanding being that if neither was knocked out in six rounds they should fight to a finish.

DOMINICK MCCAFFREY tried the mettle of John Flood, one of Sullivan's early opponents, at the opening of the New York boy's new "public" on Thursday evening, July 24. Flood did the best he knew how, but the superiority of his more youthful antagonist was made clearly apparent early in the engagement, and became more decided as the battle progressed.

JAMES WESTON AND CHARLES DOUGLAS, both colored, fought for two hundred dollars, four rounds, Queensberry rules, above McComb's Dam Bridge, this city, July 25. Weston knocked his opponent down repeatedly, but finally lost the fight by hitting a foul blow in the fourth round. John Fitzpatrick seconded Weston, "Budge" Dwyer looking after Douglas, and John Murphy officiating as referee.

JOHNNY CLARK will open the Fall and Winter season at his Club Theatre, Philadelphia, on Saturday evening, Aug. 2 and boxers, wrestlers and other sporting attractions can apply for engagement as directed in advertisement.

MIKE DONOVAN paid a flying visit to Boston last week, got back safely, and desires to express his appreciation of the courtesies extended to him by the champion, as also by Patsy Sheppard and Joe Goss.

WILLIAM SHERRIFF, alias "Prussian," is credited with having "bested" Bilston Jack, recently from Pittsburg, in a four-round glove-contest at the Champion's Rest, Philadelphia, on the evening of July 28.

THERE are two letters in our care for Charles Mitchell.

LACROSSE.

THE CAUGHNAWAGA TEAM SCORE EASY VICTORIES.

The games in which the team of Caughnawaga Indians from Canada were pitted against the New York Club and the Independents respectively did not attract a large assemblage to the Polo Grounds, this city, on July 23, 24. Those who were present, however, witnessed some very pretty work, notwithstanding the fact that the great superiority of the visiting players was very apparent, and detracted from the satisfaction afforded by the displays. The visitors first encountered the New York Club, whom they defeated by a score of three goals to two in the hour and a half to which the contest was limited. The throwing of the New-Yorkers was very favorably commented upon. The victory of the redskins over the Independents was much more decisive, the figures being five to two in their favor, and even then they were not called upon to exert themselves much. The Caughnawaga team was as follows: Goal, Francis Hemrock; point, Cross-the-River; cover-point, Angus Beauvais; defence-field, White Eagle, Louis Belle and Louis Hemrock; centrefield, Joseph Leclair; home-field, Angus Jacob, John Phillips and Dominique Monique; outside-home, Strong Arm; inside-home, Andrew Morris. The opposing teams were composed as printed in our last issue. R. Wilson refereed the first game and T. M. Marson the second. On the 25th a game was to have taken place on the Brooklyn Baseball Club Grounds, sixteen players chosen from the two white clubs being opposed by the Indians, but the threatening appearance of the weather kept away a number of the palefaces, and the game was necessarily off. An exhibition between a team composed of whites, assisted by White Eagle and Strong Arm, and an equal number of Indians was substituted, the latter side taking four of the seven goals. On the 26th a game was played on the grounds of the Williamsburg A. C., ten Indians opposing a picked white team of like number. The weather was fine, the crowd large and the contest full of interest, the result being a tie on three goals.

THE Peterboro Club second twelve defeated the Trents of Hastings at Peterboro, Ont., July 23, taking three straight games.

THE Okos went to Trenton, Ont., July 22, and played a match with the Trentons, who beat them in three straight games.

THE SHAMROCKS defeated the visiting Toronto Club team in a match played in Montreal July 26.

AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS., the local lacrosse team beat the Somervilles in a return game July 26 by a score of three goals to nothing.

THE Young Canadians of Richmond Hill visited Brompton, Ont., July 23, and there defeated the Excelsior team in a match for the Western District championship. They won three of the five games played.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP of Eastern Ontario and a pennant were contended for by the Cornwalls and Renfrews at Cornwall July 26, the former winning in three straight games.

CRICKET.

THE PHILADELPHIANS IN ENGLAND.

The Philadelphians played the Gentlemen of Northumberland July 11 and 12 in Newcastle. The wicket, owing to recent rain, was dead and very treacherous. The visitors, thanks to excellent batting by R. Newhall, Scott and Morgan and effective bowling by Lowry and MacNutt, won by 96 runs.

The most noteworthy achievement of the tour was the meritorious victory scored by the Philadelphians over the Gentlemen of Surrey, whom they defeated by three wickets July 17 and 18 at the Oval after an exciting contest. The visitors lost the toss, and F. W. Bush and H. W. Bainbridge went in to commence the Surrey batting. C. A. Newhall and Lowry being the bowlers. A good stand was made, and, in spite of bowling changes, the total was hit to 59 before the first wicket fell. The fourth batsman left at 82, but Lindsay and Trollope hit with great freedom, and when the last wicket fell the total was 190. Scott and Clark first represented the Philadelphians at the wickets, and the latter was dismissed for 7, the total being 14. R. S. Newhall, Scott and Law ran up useful scores, and played capital cricket on a wicket that was none the better for half an hour's rain that had fallen during the afternoon. When stumps were drawn for the day at seven o'clock the Philadelphians had lost nine wickets for 144. On the second day seven runs were added before Lowry was bowled, and the inning was over for 151. W. F. Bush and Bainbridge were deputed to open the batting a second time for the home-team, C. A. Newhall and MacNutt being the bowlers. Eighteen runs were made before Bainbridge had to retire, and although the next four batsmen failed to materially assist the total they stayed long enough to enable Bush to place ninety-five to his credit. His inning was marked by free and sound cricket, and contained, among other items, eleven fours and seven threes. Money Wigram and Freeman played in good style for their runs, the latter carrying out his bat for twenty-three, and the last wicket fell for 189. The somewhat formidable task of making 229 runs to prove victorious was set the Americans, and after they had lost four wickets for 49 very few present thought they would accomplish the feat. Thayer, Scott and Brockie put a different aspect on the game, but it was left to MacNutt and Law, after seven wickets were down for 157, to finish the match. MacNutt hit with more freedom than his companion, who exhibited capital defense. At twenty-five minutes past six 200 appeared on the telegraph-board, and then the scoring was slow for the next ten minutes, the excitement increasing with every run. 220 went up a quarter of an hour before the time for drawing stumps, and five minutes later, when the winning hit was made, a hearty cheer greeted the victory of the Philadelphians, who won a grand match by three wickets. The fielding of the visitors had been above the average throughout the match, and on the second day was particularly smart. It should be mentioned that the Surrey team lost the assistance of Wyld in their second inning, that gentleman having been suddenly required to join his regiment, which is ordered on active service.

The cable brings us tidings of two decisive defeats sustained last week by the Philadelphians while contending against the amateur strength of Sussex and Kent. Sussex won by ten wickets the game played July 21 and 22 in Brighton. The respective totals were: Philadelphia, 181 and 164; Sussex, 302 and 46, with no wickets down. The chief contributors of runs on behalf of the Philadelphians were Brockie with 56 and 24; Clark, 34 and 17; R. Newhall, 31 and 9; MacNutt, 20 and 17; and Brewster, 10 and 26. The game played July 25 and 26 in Maldstone was won by Kent, with six wickets to spare. The Philadelphians scored 106 runs in their first inning and 229 in their second. The Gentlemen of Kent made 296 runs in their first inning and 43 in their second, for the loss of four wickets. Stoever batted remarkably well for 33 and 42. Scott and Thayer made a long stand in the second inning, scoring respectively 44 and 43. Up to July 26, inclusive, they had played 17 games, eight of which were won, five were lost and four drawn.

A CLUB has been organized in Clark, Dakota, with A. C. Ball, Arthur Grove and Arthur Hunter of England and Burt Lym as organizers. Lym played in the Watertown Club last year. There are a number of good clubs in Dakota.

SPORTING NOTES.

.... Samuel Yates, on behalf of the employes of The Sun paper department, on July 22 presented Harry Taxter, its superintendent, with a set of fishing tackle valued at $150.

.... In a race up Mount Washington from the Glen House, recently, one of four lads who started accomplished the feat in two hours and fifteen minutes—a record, it is said, that has not been beaten since 1856, when a guide made the ascent in a few minutes less time.

.... A horse at Riverside, L. I., has a weakness for eating chickens. This quadruped eats feathers and all, whenever he can catch the chickens.

.... The biggest man in Australia is said to be a publican named Thomas Jennings, residing in Hobart. He stands 5ft. 10in. high, weighs 455lb, measures 68in. around the chest, 82in. around the waist and 20½in. around the calf. He never took a dose of medicine, although he is now sixty years old.

.... It is said that the profits of the gambling-house at Monte Carlo are seventeen millions of francs. In 1859 it was in its infancy, and was a small, insignificant concern. When the gambling establishment at Homburg was closed, M. Blanc bought up the Monaco business, obtaining a long lease from the Prince, with all kinds of privileges, which were largely paid for. His success has been stupendous. What aided him most was the fact that the closure of Homburg was followed by that of all the gambling-houses of Europe, so that gamblers of all nationalities, men and women, have been thrown into his clutches. Year by year the area of the pernicious influences of Monte Carlo has increased, in ever-widening circles, until it is now felt all over the world, in Europe, Asia, Africa and America.

.... Miss Emma Rosenheim and Miss Katie Kelly on July 23 swam from Fort Lafayette to the Bennett baths at Fort Hamilton, L. I., about a quarter of a mile. They afterwards gave an exhibition of fancy swimming in the bath, as also did the Misses Annie and Ellen Hussey.

.... In a roller polo match at Black Rock, Mass., July 21, the Newburyports won three straight games from the Cape Anns.

.... Robert Calvin, alias "Manchester Bob," for many years proprietor of "The Rabbit Warren," an old country sporting house in Brooklyn, N. Y., died suddenly last week at his residence in that city, aged fifty-five years. He was buried on Sunday, July 27.

.... Captain Traynor landed in his dory at Martinicus Island, Me., July 23, nine days from New Haven, and proceeded next day on his prolonged journey to Bristol, Eng.

.... Robert Farrell, a horse-trainer and sporting man, on July 24 shot and killed Thomas Calvert in Maysville, Ky.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ No replies by mail or telegraph. Letters that do not reach this office until Monday noon will not be answered until the following week.

Theatrical, Musical, Etc.

I. S., Washington.—1. Inquire in your city. E. L. Davenport and McCullough played in various cities together. 2. The latter has been starring off and on for about fifteen years. 3. You and "Panchon" are one. 4. You probably know that they played it in Chicago, if they did. We have no time to hunt up the date. 5. Matilda Heron played Medea frequently. We saw her in it as far back as 1857. 6. Lotta was born in this city.

LAUBER'S GARDEN.—1. We cannot spare space to give addresses. 2. We know of no such paper in Germany.

J. S. A.—Address them through CLIPPER Post-office.

C. A. W.—See "J. S. A." and "Lauber's Garden."

B. S., Jackson.—1. Probably about thirty dollars a week, without expenses. 2. We do not care to express an opinion on such a matter, which is purely one of trade.

READER.—That is a mere matter of individual taste.

E. H. D., Wallsboro.—1. There are several. It is not for us to recommend any. 2. We do not know her. 3. Twenty cents a line.

J. R., Louisville.—1. Jenny Lind last appeared in this country early in 1852. 2. Probably in 1851.

BOWERY, Brooklyn.—Edward Harrigan was born in this city in 1845, went on the stage in 1867, and his first partner was Alexander O'Brien.

S. W., Providence.—1. Of necessity, "the original Dick Sands" must have died long ago. We cannot guess whether you mean Dick Sands the circus-performer or Dick Sands the clog-dancer. As the latter's name appears almost from week to week in our amusement-news columns, we must conclude that you mean the former. He is dead. 2. We give neither addresses nor ages of professionals.

G. AND P., Baltimore.—1. Such an advertisement would cost $5.20 for each insertion. 2. Yes; see letter-list.

D. L.—Address him in care of CLIPPER Post-office.

L. C. M., Jeanerette.—1. You will find Barrett's address in our Routes Ahead weekly. 2. It is uncertain about her return. 3. Subscription to THE CLIPPER is four dollars a year.

R. F.—Address in care of CLIPPER Post-office.

R. E. J., Bellefontaine.—It is not the province of this department to pass upon the reliability of individuals.

J. K. Y. B., Greenville.—See reply to "D. L."

G. A. S., Philadelphia.—You can buy it for much less than it will cost you to make it, and for very much less than it would cost us in space to tell you how to make it.

EXCELSIOR, Oswego.—1. See Baseball. 2. Thomas Whiffen was the Pittacus Greene when "Hazel Kirke" was first played at the Madison-square Theatre, this city.

Cards.

S. F.—The flush beats the three aces.

D. W. C., Epping.—A wins with high and low.

F. A. D., Cleveland.—There cannot be two lone hands at once at regular euchre. Except at mongrel or railroad euchre, a man must make five tricks to count four.

W. D.—The bet is a draw. A straight is generally played to beat but two pair, but it is sometimes played to beat threes. Because of this conflict, a straight has no value at all unless it has been agreed to play it, and then it should also be agreed upon what it shall beat.

C. E. R., Lafayette.—The dealer won. As he was not called, any hand, three cards or forty, was good, his bet alone winning.

C. W. F., Green Bay.—Low-jack won.

EUCHRE, Chicago.—He could not play alone.

W. E. D.—See reply to "W. D."

F., Troy.—The count is 16 for 7, 6, 8, 9, 9.

E. S., Altoona.—The count is one for the jack.

F. M.—Both go out on eight.

J. T. R., Chicago.—The widow ceases to be such, or a secret hand, as soon as it is turned, and cannot then be taken in its entirety. By special agreement the widow can be taken after it has been exposed, and some few players agree so to play.

NOVICE.—They cannot be cut after the draw.

Political.

W. E. R., Kansas City.—You set too difficult a task.

G. R.—Three years in this State.

J. H. S., Oswego.—The vote of this city for Tilden in 1876 was 112,530, 123,015 for Hancock in 1880, and 124,914 for Cleveland in 1882. In the remainder of the State both Tilden and Hancock got more votes than Cleveland. Tilden got 9,006 more, although his plurality in the State was but 32,000, while Cleveland's was 192,854. Outside of this city, Hancock in 1880 got 410,596 votes in this State, and yet was beaten 63,218, while Cleveland in 1882 got 410,404, or 192 fewer than Hancock, and yet beat his opponent by 105,825 in the State outside of this city.

W. B. A.—You lose. California split in 1880.

W. E. S., Washington.—Our time is too valuable to devote it to mere sums in arithmetic.

E. E. P., Blackinton.—In Massachusetts there is no law to prevent a man from voting because he has bet on an election. We have taken the pains to have this certified through the courtesy of Mr. John F. Dever of the Board of Registration of Voters, Boston, who in turn called upon the Secretary of State for Massachusetts and had this decision endorsed.

A AND B, St. Louis.—A loses. Gov. Cleveland did not veto the Elevated-railroad five-cent bill as a matter of State law. It is law that the State, as represented by its legislators, shall regulate corporations, and it is for the courts, and not for a Governor, to pass upon the constitutionality of legislative acts.

G. F. F., Boston.—The bet is on the votes in November next. You will not lose if Blaine dies.

Athletic.

J. G. L., Oneonta.—We have no record for a race run under the conditions mentioned.

BUFFALO.—The rules are the same as those for tugs pulled on earth.

G. W. C., Helena.—S having bet that he could beat H, and failed to do so, he loses.

J. C. G., Rochester.—Apply to J. R. Flannery, secretary and treasurer of U. S. National Amateur Lacrosse Association, P. O. Box 738, N. Y. City.

PYRAMID, Detroit.—We never heard of a wrestler bearing that name.

R. P. H., Westfield.—See the records in CLIPPER ANNUAL for 1884; price, 25 cents.

SUBSCRIBER.—See "R. P. H., Westfield."

W. H. H.—Bennett (Deerfoot) was an American Indian.

PED, Ware.—Wm. Lang's fastest record for one mile is 4m. 17⅛s., made in a dead heat with W. Richards. His 4m. 2s., having been down-hill, does not form a record.

RECORD.—1. We will in due course publish the time in our columns. It was not cabled. 2. There had previously been no recorded time for those distances in England.

W. L., Laramie City.—According to your statement, it was no race.

Baseball and Cricket.

W. E. G., Pittsburg.—James Galvin made the home run in the 1 to 0 game between the Allegheny and Boston Clubs May 2, 1877.

J. J. H., London.—Hornung and Sutton of the Boston Club.

L. R., Baltimore.—The Louisvilles were defeated by the Metropolitans in the first three games in this city.

W. M. W., Williamsport.—The third-baseman is given an assist.

B. S. H., Berkeley Springs.—It is a legitimate pitch, according to National League rules.

ENITRAM.—1. J. L. Richmond and Charles Foley have retired from ball-playing. 2. Rowen played with the New York Club last week. 3. See answer to "C. B. G.," Philadelphia.

C. F., Chicago.—M. J. Kelly's picture was given in THE CLIPPER dated May 29, 1880; Gore's not at all.

WESTSIDE CLUBS.—Bet is off. A special agreement was necessary to carry it into any other day than that on which the scheduled game was to be played.

F. E. S.—Each pitched in nineteen winning games up to July 20.

A. F. P., Toronto.—The Providence and Detroit Clubs played an eighteen-inning game Aug. 17, 1882, with a score of 1 to 0 in favor of former.

SUBSCRIBER, St. Louis.—Richmond played with the Athletics in 1875 and also in 1882, the first season of the American Association.

W. N. G., Louisville.—The Knickerbocker Club of New York City in 1845.

QUICKSTEP.—It is an earned run, providing chances had not been given to put the side out.

W. E. K., Newark.—The batter is out.

EXCELSIOR, Oswego.—An earned run is made by good batting and base-running before chances have been given to put three men out. Theatrical Answers next week.

A. B. L., Toledo.—The bet is void because of false basis, if it was made on the strength of that ticking.

OTTOWA, Portland.—As you describe to us the wording of the bet, you had to win unless the score on the second day was a duplicate of that on the first. The word "either" is a power.

READER.—1. They wore blue stockings almost every season since 1875. 2. We believe they wore red stockings during part of the season of 1882.

E. W., Columbus, Ga.—The Baltimores ranked seventh in the American Association at that date.

E. S. C., Kansas City.—We gave the correct standing in the issue dated July 19. Deduct two victories of the Mets over Indianapolis, and one victory each of Allegheny, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Louisville and Columbus over Louisville, Baltimore, Brooklyn, Allegheny and Washington respectively, and you will have the standing on July 12.

G. C. J., Jamestown.—The bet is off.

W. T., Hudson.—A wins. The score need not be the exact figures.

D. N., Springfield. B wins.

C. B. G., Philadelphia.—Opinions differ, and we decline to express ours.

BROOKLYN READER.—They should have furnished a ball in place of the one stolen.

Billiards.

L. S. H., Tyler.—1. A 5x10 table is used for matches. It must have six pockets, unless otherwise agreed upon. 2. He must call ball and pocket if it is agreed to play the call-game without making any other stipulation. Usually the practice of the room governs.

POOL-TENDER, Milwaukee.—The pool-tender could stop the play after A had pocketed eight balls, as that number are game. This is different from allowing him to pocket fifteen and then refusing to pay the prize.

Dice, Dominoes, Raffles, Tossing, Etc.

SHIPMASTER, San Francisco.—The second throw is veid. The player throws again. The aces stand.

POKER DICE.—1. But two throws, properly. 2. Properly, the hand is sixes and aces against deuces and aces. Even were it aces ahead of sixes, it would beat aces and deuces. 3. High pair wins. 4. Straights do not count, as a rule; when they do, their value should be agreed upon.

Aquatic.

READERS.—Courtney did not lead Hanlan at any time during the last mile at Lachine.

J. C.—See page 95 of CLIPPER ANNUAL for 1884.

W. A. R., Sherman.—The first professional scullers' race G. W. Lee engaged in was with J. A. Kennedy, on Greenwood Lake, N. Y., June 17, 1879. It was in July of the preceding year that he rowed as an amateur at Henley, Eng.

E. B.—According to your statement, the referee decided properly. A's turning the stakeboat in the wrong direction was cause for disqualification.

H. H.—Looking toward the bow of a ship, starboard is the right and port (or larboard) the left.

Turf.

DUNDEE.—Kettledrum won the Derby in 1861.

T. E. F., Fall River.—The report published in THE CLIPPER made no mention of that matter.

M. S. C.—Write W. T. Chester, Box 274, N. Y. City.

ALBERT.—Apply to the head trainer of a stable, and work your way up.

L. C. F., Louisville.—Apply to Peck & Snyder, 129 Nassau street, this city.

C. McD., Newport.—Patsy Sheppard's opponents in the prize ring in this country were Con. Riordan, Mike Coburn and Jim Murphy.

B. C. M.—John Dempsey was born in County Kildare, Ireland, in 1862. Address care of this office.

EUREKA, Trenton.—Wright & Ditson, 580 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

J. G. Z., Buffalo.—The total eclipse of the sun in the United States occurred Aug. 7, 1869.

CLERICUS.—It is a bet, in spite of the subterfuge.

M., St. John.—Ed. James, whose address is in our business department, will forward a book containing cock-fighting rules on receipt of fifty cents.

SUBSCRIBER, Duluth.—There may be. America is a very large place. It might take us a year to find out.

R. W., Youngstown.—Thomas Moore the poet was brought up in the Roman Catholic faith.

W. D., Chicago.—We can furnish twenty-four only of the back numbers you want. Remit $2.40, and we will mail them.

MARGARET FLORENCE ST. JOHN,

vocalist and actress, whose portrait appears on our first page, was born in Plymouth, Eng., and is the daughter of a musician of that town. To her father she is indebted for her early musical training, and it is recorded that while very young she sang at a public concert in St. James Hall, Plymouth, attracting much attention by her proficiency not only as a singer but also as a pianist. She finished her preparatory studies in London, and soon afterwards made her first appearance on the operatic stage at Preston, Eng., as one of the sisters in Rossini's "Cinderella." At Norwich, Eng., on Easter-Monday of the same year, she sang the Arline role in "The Bohemian Girl." Then she played contralto parts in English opera under Mr. Durand, and afterwards accompanied Blanche Cole's English-opera Co. through the British provinces, sustaining mezzo-soprano and contralto roles. Following the latter engagement, she joined Rose Hersee's operatic troupe, and with this company she performed in a series of operas at the Crystal Palace in August and September, 1877. In April, 1878, Miss St. John made her London debut, appearing at the Folly Theatre as Germaine in "Les Cloches de Corneville." The following month she accompanied the "Cloches de Corneville" Co., under Alexander Henderson's direction, on a provincial tour. Her first created part, and the one through which she became at once popular in London, was that of Madame Favart in Offenbach's comic opera of that title. This she played at the London Strand, April 12, 1879. "Madame Favart" had a run of 502 consecutive nights, during which period Miss St. John became an established comic-opera favorite among London playgoers. On Sept. 18, 1880, when "Olivette" in English was produced at the Strand, Miss St. John created the title-role. When Planquette's comic opera "Nell Gwynne," was originally produced at the Avenue Theatre, London, Feb. 7, 1884, Miss St. John sang the title-role, and on April 28 went with the company to the Royal Comedy Theatre, London, continuing in "Nell Gwynne" up to May 22. "The Mascot" was revived 23 (she had previously appeared in the opera in London), and she sang in the title-role until the Comedy closed for the season July 12. Miss St. John has been twice married. Her first husband, from whom she was divorced in the Fall of 1883, was Lithgow James, an English professional, who has sung and acted here. Her second husband is M. Marius of London, also a professional.

THE WORLD OF AMUSEMENTS.

Brief Notes of Show-life Everywhere.

— Theodore Barriere, the French dramatic author, had an attack of cholera in 1854 in Paris. He was taken suddenly ill as he was going out for his accustomed ride. He felt cold all over, and shivered from head to foot. He immediately went to the next cafe, ordered a carafon of brandy, and drank it off. Thus invigorated, he managed to get into the saddle, and galloped along the boulevards. At the corner of the Rue Richelieu, Paris, he stopped at another cafe, swallowed a second carafon of brandy, and resumed his ride. He dismounted again when he got to the Rue Royale and repeated the dose. He then started at a gallop for the Bois de Bologne, and continued the treatment by ordering a fourth carafon at one of the restaurants there. He rode home by the Rue de Rivoli, dropped off his horse half asleep, half awake, made his way to bed, and slept for thirty hours. He was cured when he awoke.

— The J. G. Stuttz Comedy Co. for 1884–5 will comprise Miss E. Alma Stuttz, J. G. Stuttz, Mrs. Rilla O'Neal, Stella Eulie, Minnie Hegner, Emma Verneau, Ivy Stuttz, C. T. Wolfe, C. A. Larkin, Frank Eans, Virgil Maxey, Wm. Axe and Ross O'Neal. In the orchestra: J. C. Pro (leader), Carl Hegner, Louis Blas, Bon Vojtek, Wm. Gay, J. A. Mitchell, Louis Dinmon and Jas. A. Stuart.

— "Two Hours with Poets and Musicians" is the title of the entertainments given by Madame C. C. Rossiter of London, Eng., since her arrival in Canada. She recites tragic and comic selections, and plays classical and modern music on various instruments.

— E. F. Thorne is doing athletic turns at Long Branch.

— Harry Webber opened his season at Louisville, Ky., July 28 in "Nip and Tuck." His company numbers twenty people, band and orchestra included, and the principals are Harry Webber, Jas. E. Moore (business-manager), L. R. Maddox, John F. Flood, Arnold Woolford, T. Harry Lee, M. J. Stine, Eva Webber, Minnie Burleigh, Mazie Messick, Annie Mares, Carrie Dillon Webber (child) and Prof. L. Bryant Smith, with twelve musicians.

— Professor Crouch, composer of "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Dermot Astore," etc., is engaged on an autobiography, which he will call "Before and Behind the Scenes." It will embrace sketches of character of theatrical and musical authors, painters, singers and dancers during the present century. The first volume has now been completed many months, and the second is far advanced.

— C. W. Bowser has been hunting in Kentucky, a country he is familiar with.

— Effie Douglass Putnam, who injured herself while out riding, is slowly recovering. She is to go with Rhea next season.

— W. F. Burroughs of Lillian Olcott's support and James S. Burdette, impersonator, were the principal attractions at a concert given for a charitable purpose at the Avon Beach Hotel, Bath, L. I., July 23.

— Col. Mapleson announces that he will open the Opera Festival in the Chicago, Ill., Festival Building April 6, 1885.

— Frank and Jennie Allen have been engaged for the season of '84–85 with the Sawtelle Comedy Co.

— Gossip has within two weeks given Maurice Grau two partners in his Judic venture for 1885–6. John Stetson was first named, now Henry E. Abbey is said to have an interest in the company. Mr. Abbey, we are told, was among Judic's auditors during her recent engagement in London, Eng.

— Some weeks ago we announced the engagement of William Stafford and Miss Evelyn Foster. The wedding is now said to be fixed for Aug. 11, at Block Island. Old Neptune is to give the bride away.

— A cable dispatch, dated July 24, and sent from London, Eng., says: "It is persistently asserted in Catholic circles that there is great likelihood of Mary Anderson joining the Carmelite nuns." In our opinion, there is no likelihood of it at all, so long as the box-office continues healthy.

— "Timon of Athens" is being rewritten by Eugene Field of The News, Chicago. The late N. H. Bannister adapted it to the modern stage about fifty years ago, and it was brought out in this city. It never amounted to much. Perhaps Chicago has sufficient of the literary instinct to make it go.

— Herr Seli Simonson, formerly of Berlin, has been engaged as musical-director for one of Col. J. A. McCaull's opera companies for next season.

— Sol Smith Russell's Co. opened their season at Sheboygan, Wis., July 28. They were rehearsing in that city from the 24th.

— Among the new members of D. S. Harold's Combination will be Agnes Hampton and Flo. Campbell and sister. Messrs. Leo, Foster, Lewis, Daymon, Porter and Gordon, Mrs. Lew Raymond and the Misses Sylvester, Du Sauld, Adams and Gordon of last season's company are retained. J. J. Nosworr is stage-manager, and H. Hogle is in advance.

— The St. Quinten Opera Co. has been reorganized. They sang "Trial by Jury" in Toronto, Ont., last week, and are reported to have secured new scenery, etc.,

— Harriet Webb, reader and elocutionist, thinks of appearing on the dramatic stage next season in a new play, entitled "Madame Celeste."

— The Findlay, O., Band Tournament Association announces its fourth annual competition for Sept. 3, 4. J. A. Scott is president.

— Musical-director Homeirer of the Baldwin Theatre, San Francisco, is writing the incidental music for George M. Ciprico's play "A Daughter of Nature," to be produced by the Elisler-Lee-Wes on Co.

— Charles E. Locke, late of the Wagner Trio tour, is at Duxbury, Mass.

— We understand, on reliable authority, that Fred B. Warde will make a starring tour in the Spring of 1885. He will go as far West as Oregon.

— The O. D. Byron Combination open their season at Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 22.

— The Arne Walker Dramatic Co. (Phil H. Irving, manager) open Aug. 4 and week at the Grand Opera-house, Indianapolis, Ind., in "The Two Orphans" and "Parthenia and Ingomar."

— Edward Hanlon sailed from England July 26.

— Arthur Rehan's "7-20-8" Co. will open at Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 1.

— Patti Rosa's Company for next season is as follows: C. M. Lester, E. L. Williams, John W. Dunne, Con. T. Murphy, Wm. McCready, J. S. Boise, Chas. H. Hofman, Ted D. Marks, Mrs. W. H. Murdock, Fannie Jacobs and Maude White. Con. T. Murphy will act as stage-manager, Chas. H. Hofman will be musical-director, Ted D. Marks will go in advance, and Frank Irving will manage the company. They will open in Providence, R. I., Aug. 25.

— A contemporary boasts its own enterprise by chiding a daily for announcing by cable last week that a certain actress is again coming to this country, for it had itself made that announcement "nearly six weeks ago." Right underneath is this paragraphic lesson against glass-house-stone-throwing: "Sig. Sivori, the well-known violinist of Bryant's Minstrels, is a prosperous physician in this city." THE CLIPPER made that announcement five years ago.

— Lotta was to sail for home July 27.

— It is cabled that Lillian Russell will come back to us in time to begin a season in December next.

— Miss Millward, who was here with Irving last season, sailed for this country again July 26.

— Mlle. De Lussan will sing at Richfield Springs, N. Y., Aug. 2.

— J. Lealie Gossin is on Aug. 21 to superintend a musical entertainment at the Kaaterskill Theatre and Opera-house, Kingston, N. Y., which is to be dedicated Aug. 2.

— Nixon and Zimmerman of Philadelphia were at the Grand Hotel, Kingston, N. Y., last week.

— Joseph Brooks set sail from England July 26 for home.

— George Riddle last week gave readings at Richfield Springs. He read at Kingston, N. Y., July 26.

— Brignoli is among the Catskills.

— A merchant in Berlin was fascinated by an opera-singer. He proposed to visit her, and as a propitiatory measure and as an excuse he sent her two elegant dresses, asking her to choose one and telling her that he would call for the other. She sent back word: "I cannot choose, I so like both. You need not call."

— Cappa's Seventh-regiment will do the Dutch—that is, the "German"—at Lake Mahopac, N. Y., July 31.

— According to a correspondent, Elise Lamierre was privately wedded in this city July 9 to a prominent professional. The same correspondent informs us that E. A. Monell, advance-agent, contemplates matrimony with a lady of Greenpoint, L. I.

— "Confusion" received its 400th representation in London July 12.

— Fred Bryton is announced to travel with Clara Morris next season.

— "Cherubs," Joe Bradford's play for Robson and Crane, will be originally produced when the comedians open their Fall season, at Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 15.

— The "Rag Baby" Co. for next season, as completed by Eugene Tompkins, will include Rillie Deaves, late of the Madison-square Theatre; Mark Sullivan, of variety fame; Bessie Sansom, C. H. Drew, Clara Lane, Nina Jackson and E. A. Osgood. Frank Daniels, H. J. Connor and Helen Reimer of last season's company have been re-engaged, and Harry Braham will continue to lead the orchestra.

— W. G. Hunter Jr. will act as business-manager and treasurer of the Daly's "Vacation" Co. during 1884–5.

— Chas. L. Davis was in Rochester, N. Y, on a flying visit July 23.

CIRCUS AND SIDESHOW CHAT.

TENTS BLOWN DOWN.—The Barnum Circus was showing at Cortland, N. Y., on the afternoon of July 23, when a storm suddenly came up. The wind, rushing around the hills about the town, produced a whirlwind, which struck the performing-tent from the west side, near the dressing-tent. In a moment the guy-ropes were torn from their fastenings, and soon the big tent was leveled. The hippodrome performance was about to commence, and the terrified auditors rushed out among the horses. The scene is described as intensely exciting for a time. No deaths are reported, though about seventy-five persons were wounded, twenty-five more or less seriously. None of the circus attaches was hurt. Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson's loss was confined to the canvas, and is placed at a high figure. The accident necessitated a postponement of the evening performance. Mr. Hutchinson ordered all possible care taken of the sufferers.....Washburn & Bunting's Circus, on the same afternoon, was exhibiting at Richfield Springs, N. Y., when a gale struck the tents, tearing the menagerie canvas to atoms, and completely prostrating the main tent. No fatalities or serious injuries are reported. The performance was of course suspended, and the audience took refuge in neighboring barns and sheds until help arrived.

THE STEAMER City of Alexandria, which arrived here July 24, brought three hundred parrots from Mexico. They are intended for Boston. A female was among them. She has been brought for breeding purposes.

COL. ROUTH GOSHEN, it is reported, acknowledges that he is sixty-five years old, although we do not believe that he does. His last wife, nee Mary Louise Welch, with whom he is having a legal battle on the subject of alimony, says that nobody has been able to find out whether the giant is as young as that or not. The Colonel, who is back on his farm in Somerset County, N. J., is pressing his application for a divorce.

A "SACRED INDIAN MONKEY" has arrived from Europe. His coat is a bushy silver-gray.

CARDELLO AND VAN AUKEN have reunited.

THERE is a "boom" in monkeys at present. Dealers are importing them in special cargoes.

PROF. BURTON'S DOG-CIRCUS, as reorganized, already comprises eleven canines and an amusing goat. Several dogs will soon be added to the show. The three clown dogs are said to be very funny animals, and their act is quite as taking as their lamented predecessors. The Professor and his people were among the features of Capt. T. E. Halleck's benefit at Harlem July 28. Mr. Burton will work during the Summer, and is in a fair way to recover his prestige.

THE snake trade has not been affected at all by the death of Showman Reilly.

THE BLATTS, who were at Hanlan's Point, Toronto, Ont., last week, were re-engaged for a week.

MISS ETSEL ATHOL and three other midgets were last week at the Elite Roller-skating Rink, Richfield Springs, N. Y.

A DISPATCH from Rockland, Me., July 26, says: "This morning a large balloon passed over this city at a great height. No occupants were visible in the car, and the balloon disappeared out at sea."

HERE is a "trick" to add one to the myriad curios. The Baltimore Sun says: "William H. Bitting, proprietor of the Phœnix Hotel, Phœnixville, says that a day or two ago he went into the kitchen of his house, where he found a toad. Not wishing to injure it, he took a broom and commenced sweeping it out of the room. In doing so he turned the toad over on its back, when it commenced crying like a child. He had heard that they would at times do so, but he never before believed that such was the case."

THE failure of whiskey to cure James Reilly of snake-bite recalls the case of E. M. Worth, then a Bowery museum-manager, who was bitten by a rattlesnake July 7, 1882. He was dosed with whiskey at the hospital, and recovered with the loss of his thumb, being discharged Sept. 9. Amputation was impracticable in Reilly's case. His nervous system was so low that he would have died under the knife.

MRS. CHARLES FREEMAN of Atlanta, Ga., is another "Wonder." She arrived here July 26 on a crutch, having sprained her foot on the journey. She has never yet appeared in public, but expects to perform at Lester Wallack's Dime Museum. Like Angelique Cottin, she was born in France. She came to this country a mere child with her father, Narcisse Beigeron. She is about thirty years old, has been married twelve years, and has a son.

Their season will commence in Pueblo on Friday, Oct. 3, and the artists will leave here the latter part of September. Both George and Edward Orrin are in the United States enjoying their vacation. Edward returns to Mexico Sept. 9. George remains here, and his permanent address is care of this office.

MINSTREL AND VARIETY GOSSIP.

"These Our Actors" at Mt. Clemens.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., July 23.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER: Gus Williams is socially amusing the "Clemmies" with Connoly's CLIPPER story of the "Broken-German" leader of orchestra who "kicked," and who, when too much was required of him, insisted that they "coodent exbect blood from a shkeleton."..... Hallen of Hallen and Hart is on the way here, his wife "summering" for a short time at Decatur, Ill. .....Clark of Emmerson and Clark will remain until Sept. 1, when he hopes to be sufficiently recovered to join his partner. A complimentary benefit will be tendered him July 29.....The entertainment at the Opera-house 18, given by the professionals stopping here, was a great success. The programme included the names of Harry Morris, Mark Murphy, Jno. Dyllyn, Beattie and Bentley, Rosa Lee, Cavana and Mason, Mullen and Daily, E. Rosenbaum and Charles Connolly.... Chas. W. Young is re-engaged with the Murray & Murphy Combination.....Chas. O. Seamon has purchased the "Owl Cottage" for sixteen hundred dollars....Cavana and Mason have been engaged for the season by Manager Raynor of Kansas City..... The theatrical baseball-players, who at first could scarcely finish their meals in their anxiety to get out to the field, are gradually but decidedly weakening; the novelty is losing a bit of its charm, and certain of the fielders are suggesting the use of chairs. At any critical portion of the game the healthy yells and howls of advice of different kinds to the excited party who is madly chasing himself around the bases are enough to turn his head, and if he followed all the directions roared at him, one leg would go in one direction and the other in another. At such an exciting time, too, the nervous party who catches the ball is wildly requested to throw it in every direction of the compass, and—bewildered by the variety of orders—simplifies matters by hitting anybody on the nose with the ball, and then feels that he has accomplished something. Joe Dowling is stage-manager—we mean captain—and makes earnest endeavors to make "the act" go. The number of murderous licks made by some of the batsmen at balls that will sneak by, and won't be hit, is disheartening, and directs attention to the ridiculously small size of the ball. One of football size would give a man a chance to whang it once in a while, and cheer him up wonderfully. The mistakes, themselves, however, are sources of enjoyment, and, altogether, the scheme is one of pleasure and benefit to all concerned....."The Major MacWaddigan" is the title of a new song written and composed expressly for Dyllyn, character-actor, by Charles Connolly..... Some of the theatrical "boatmen" do a very good "bluff" act on engaging their first boat, and one might easily be led into believing that they were old hands at the business; but when they sit with their backs to the rudder, and begin industriously pulling away at the oars, they—to speak gently—"give themselves away" in "dandy" shape....Club-swinger Cook is the champion drinker of the mineral waters, and says he'd sooner lose his board-bill than miss his regular morning medicinal cocktail.....Keith still retains the management of the Opera-house.....Bandmaster Skinner serenades the hotel guests every few evenings..... Manager Rosenbaum's debut as a performer was very successful.....Hines and Remington, sketch-artists, are coming next week.....Percy Lorain and Thos. Dayton left for Detroit 21 to play a week at White's Grand Theatre with Morrissey's Hibernicon.....Roller-skating and "chasing ice-cream chips" are two of the popular methods of passing the time.....Sitting around stoves (with real fire in them) was one of the novelties last week, during the passing "cold wave." MAJOR HOGAN.

FERNANDO FLEURY will go to Kansas City and Chicago after finishing his six weeks' engagement at California Hall, Denver, Col.

GEYER AND DELHAUER are resting in Hicksville, O., and occasionally giving their "Frog and Clown" act at the Opera-house there, assisted by amateurs.

STAGE-STRUCK girls and young fellows would be rather disheartened to hear of the large salaries that are not paid to the great majority of the serio-comics and song-and-dance men of the present day; and they would be practically disillusioned did they know of the extensive letter-writing and general skirmishing to get dates, and the constant "hustling" to then "make connections" in the matter of wardrobe, new songs, arrangements, commissions, fares and landlords. Not exactly a life of gayety and comfort, but a regular up-and-down struggle—in plain words, a deal of bother, work, worry and general shifting around to just about make a living. There are but very few, now, who get "lovely" salaries—and they don't get them, either.

PROF. BURTON, who looked in upon us July 24, has reorganized his dog-circus, as set forth in our Circus Department.

THE occasional "supe" who comes in to sweep off the jig-sand still gets his little "recep," and there are a few intense auditors still left who straighten up and remark "Ah!" when the lights are turned up, and who cordially salute the bald head of the trombonist when it first flashes on the audience through the door under the stage.

CLARK HILLYER, stage-manager, informs us that the Grand Central Theatre, Wausau, Wis., closed July 20.

HAVING CLOSED in Covington, Ky., Lucy Willard has gone to Mt. Clemens, Mich., for beatitude.

THE VETERAN J. E. Green of "Mocking-bird" fame last week visited us, and rehearsed the times when he paid a dollar for a single copy of THE CLIPPER, and when he and his old partner in minstrelsy, Charles H. Duprez, cleared thirty-six thousand dollars in six weeks.

AN ENTERPRISING BRASS BAND in a little town not too recklessly near New York speculated on the 4th of July in a picnic and dance for the amusement of the townspeople, and succeeded in greatly replenishing their treasury; whereupon certain envious outsiders, writes one of THE CLIPPER'S correspondents, hinted that the band boys were drunk all the next day on account of their success. To counteract this rumor, the eminently practical leader got his men together the next evening and marched and remarched them for hours through the principal streets, to prove conclusively that they were not drunk, and that they could stand prosperity. But, alas! the soreheads then insisted that the leader had to walk his men around to get them sober.

CHARLEY REED had no sooner got back to this city than his wife went for him in legal fashion on the charge of abandonment. The minstrel was held July 24 in $500 bail, which was promptly furnished.

TOM BARRY, formerly vocal clown with Forepaugh's Circus, is now manager of the Indian Wigwam, Union and Montrose avenues, Brooklyn, N. Y. CLARK HILLYER and Allie Ballinger are at their home, Indianapolis.

MONS. BROWNLEE joined Blitz's Wild West Combination in Louisville, Ky.

IT is claimed by some that chewing-gum clears the voice, and is therefore good for singers. It is good for some singers—a great, noble, big mouthful of it—as then it would be likely to clear the voice out altogether. This remark, be it understood, does not apply, however, to the particular singer who is now reading these lines.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

OPERATIC PROJECTS.—The special correspondent of The N. Y. Times cables July 26 from London, Eng.: "Col. Mapleson in an interview says he has signed a contract with Patti for a season in London—possibly at Her Majesty's Theatre, if he can regain possession of his rights there. He has also signed a contract with the famous tenor Tamagno, who is now in South America, through his European agent. Col. Mapleson thinks that his contract with the directors of the Academy of Music in New York has been broken by them, and he is in the field for the Metropolitan Opera-house. I can authoritatively contradict the statement that Mr. Gye abandoned the contract for the Metropolitan Opera-house on account of his inability to procure artists. It all depends on Mme. Nilsson for final settlement. She had agreed to accept $2,400 per night, but demanded that a guaranty of $30,000 should be deposited by noon on Monday last. This Mr. Gye could not furnish. Herbert Gye said to me last night that it was impossible to provide artists at the rates demanded; but he does not admit that the negotiations with the Metropolitan Opera-house are finally concluded.....Carl Rosa's season of English opera at Drury-lane will extend over twelve weeks, beginning in April; therefore Col. Mapleson's Italian-opera fight with Mr. Gye cannot be fought there.....The reports that Maurice Grau has engaged a company to support Mme. Judic in America are all false. No one is engaged yet.

DALY'S COMPANY.—It was cabled on July 27 that they had had a triumphant week at Toole's Theatre. The houses steadily increased in size. Real enthusiasm was displayed throughout, and the actors met with continual recalls. Miss Rehan has established herself as a London favorite. The weekly press has been even warmer in its praise than the daily papers. Sala says in The London News: "Mr. Daly's Company rivals the Meiningeners in their rare intelligence, artistic fitness and perfect discipline." The Athenæum says: "England and France have more to learn from a company like Mr. Daly's than they have to teach them." Another dispatch says: "The clever playing of the troupe has thoroughly won over the Londoners to admiration of the American stage method of rendering light comedy, and it may fairly be predicted that Mr. Daly has started a new rage and ushered in the era of American theatrical companies in England. Mr. Daly himself says that he expected only moderate success for his experiment, and is delighted at having achieved full success in his first hazard." After reading of this artistic success, Americans at home can but sigh that Toole's Theatre is so small a house. The company will sail for this country Sept. 6.

LORD ROSEBERY on July 26 unveiled the statue to Robert Burns, the poet, which was recently presented to London, Eng., by Mr. Crawford. The statue occupies a prominent site on the Thames embankment. Around the monument there was a temporary inclosure, to which admission was obtained by ticket only. This restriction highly incensed a number of Scotch workmen, who gathered at the entrance and attempted to force their way. The police repulsed them with such vigor that at one time the disturbance threatened to create a panic, and nearly amounted to a riot.

ALF. SILVINO, equilibrist, is resting in Baltimore, Md., and enjoying himself to his heart's content.

THE LYCEUM THEATRE, London, Eng., closed night of July 26. The reason assigned by cable is that Miss Ellen Terry had been vaccinated and had become inflamed and swoollen. Probably the true reason is that Irving's performance was rank, and "Twelfth Night" a failure. Had it been a success, there would have been an understudy of Viola while Miss Terry was vaccinating, inflaming and swelling.

MANAGER THORNE of the Vaudeville Theatre, London, has bought the Hanlons' claimed right to "Confusion" because of its asserted similarity to another piece by Derrick, which they had bought of the latter, and this fends off lawsuit.

THE three chief scenes for Mary Anderson's forthcoming production of "Romeo and Juliet" at the Lyceum Theatre, London, are to be painted by John O'Connor, special artist to the Duke of Westminster. Henry E. Abbey has engaged him.

JESSIE VOKES is seriously ill of malarial fever, said to have been contracted in this country.

COVENT GARDEN, London, closed its Italian-opera season July 26. Albani, Sembrich and Patti alone drew good houses. Tickets were at a premium when Patti sang. The season has proved financially the worst for many years.

MARIE ROZE is traveling with the hope of restoring her health.

A CABLEGRAM from Paris, France, informs us that the application of Mme. Patti against the Marquis de Caux, for divorce, will be the first case tried under the new divorce law.

"THE LITTLE VISCOUNT," a new comedy in three acts, was to have been produced last week by Kate Vaughan at the Gaiety Theatre, London, Eng. The piece is understood to be a translation by Hermann Vezin of Bayard's "Vicomte de Letorieres," written for Degazet.

AN ORIGINAL historical play was to have been produced at the Globe Theatre, London, Eng., July 22, with Alice Dunning Lingard and Lucy Buckstone in the cast.

NEW YORK.

New York City.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK.—Whatever else may be said of "Distrust," it possessed the advantage of novelty, and without Messrs. Dunbar and Wren's comedy-drama at the FOURTEENTH-STREET THEATRE last week's record of things theatrical would have been woefully uneventful. The first week of "Distrust" closed July 26. The piece moved more smoothly after the first night's representation, and several members of the cast—notably Fred Wren and Edward Warren—improved in their work to such an extent that a word of praise may justly be awarded them. Ellie Wilton's conscientious effort in the role of the heroine also merits commendation. There is still room for much work on the part of the authors of "Distrust" before a tour can be thought of....The BIJOU OPERA-HOUSE was fairly well attended during the week closed 26, and "The Chimes of Normandy," as sung by the specially-engaged company, reviewed in our previous issue, proved an enjoyable attraction, all things considered. Business-manager John F. Donnelly and Orchestra-leader Gus Kerker are the temporary lessees of the house and managers of the company, and it is fair to presume they will keep the theatre open so long as the box-office returns justify such a course. If we may judge by their first week's business, they will hardly grow rich; but they are enterprising young men, nevertheless, and ought to succeed. Prior to last week's opening, Alice Oates and Miss St. Quentin had been successively promised as the prima-donna; the substitution of Adelaide Randall, it must be confessed, did not particularly strengthen the cast. The chorus sang excellently, and Mr. Kerker led a very efficient orchestra....."May Blossom" and "Falka" continued at the MADISON-SQUARE THEATRE and CASINO.....Blanche Corelli's Opera Co. closed at the COSMOPOLITAN THEATRE, singing "Patience" to a series of fairly-good houses. The Lady Jane of Genevieve Reynolds was the hit of the opera. Miss Corelli benefited evening of 28, when, in addition to "Patience," the first act of "The Mascot" was given.... Dan Sully's "Corner Grocery" was well patronized at TONY PASTOR'S THEATRE, where its seventh week closed 26.....The LONDON and HARRY MINER'S BOWERY THEATRES monopolized the variety business, Ida Siddons' Co. on 26 closing a seven weeks' stay in the former house, where they are credited with an artistic and financial success. .....The remaining city theatres were closed.

"OXYGEN," a Reece-and-Farnie burlesque, done in this country some years ago by Willie Edouin and others, will be the first production of the regular season at the Bijou Opera-house. "Aladdin" was originally thought of, but Miles & Barton recently changed their plans and determined to try "Oxygen" instead. The exact date of the Fall opening has not yet been announced, though it will probably not occur before October. There is a chance that the Rice-Dixey "Adonis" Co. may play a preliminary season at this house in September.

FRANK W. SANGER remained in the city last week.

JAMES O'NEILL arrived in town last week from San Francisco, as did also N. D. Roberts, manager, and others of Stetson's "Monte Cristo" Co. "The Millionaire" (C. T. Dazey's "An American King," retored to its original name) may be done again by Mr. O'Neill during 1885. Mr. Roberts will continue with Mr. O'Neill.

"FALKA" is in its last week at the Casino. Next week "The Little Duke" will be put on for a run, as now contemplated, until September or October, when "Nell Gwynne" will follow. In the latter opera, as announced in these columns heretofore, Lillian Russell will very likely be seen.

THE friends of E. Giro found bail ($6,000) for him July 23, and he was released from Ludlow-street Jail.

THE three days' festival of the Beethoven Mænnerchor and their guests ended July 23 with a grand dinner and concert at West Brighton Beach, Coney Island. Max Spicker led a chorus of one thousand voices, and Herman Borsin, tenor, and H. Trost, baritone, were the principal soloists. During the festival no visitor was allowed to pay for his entertainment, and the whole cost of the affair to the New-Yorkers is said to have been about $23,000. In return, the visiting warblers from Buffalo presented their Gotham brethren with a punch-bowl valued at $1,000, and a similar gift, worth $1,300, came from the Rochester visitors.

TILLOTSON & WILLIAMS' seven weeks' lease of the Union-square Theatre will run from Aug. 18, and "Queena" is already billed as the opening attraction. It is stated that Eben Plympton and Lillian Cleves will do leading roles during this engagement.

"MAY BLOSSOM," now in its fifteenth week at the Madison-square Theatre, is drawing paying houses, as reported by the management, who expect to keep the piece on until October.

IN "CALLED BACK" at the Fifth-avenue Theatre, W. J. Ferguson will do a heavy part. Mr. Ferguson thus rejoins the Madison-square forces after an absence of over a year. C. P. Flockton and Marie Burroughs will be in the cast, in addition to Mantell and Miss Millward, previously announced. Miss Millward is now on her way here from England. Two weeks' open time will remain at the the choice of performers for the coming season, as Manager Heuman intends to try and make his theatre the "Bijou" of the Bowery.

AT THE PEOPLE'S THEATRE rehearsals have commenced of Harry Miner's two "Silver King" Companies. One will be headed by Frederick De Belleville, the other by F. C. Bangs.

MRS. T. ALLSTON BROWN and son are at Mt. Pleasant, N. J., enjoying all sorts of country pleasures.

ELLIOTT BARNES' play for the Union-square Theatre will be called "The Artist's Daughter," instead of "The Marriage Certificate."

IT is reported that at a meeting last week of all the parties interested, Landlord James and Lessees Miles & Barton of the Bijou Opera-house adjusted their difficulties regarding that house. James is to finish the building and Miles & Barton are to withdraw their suit for damages.

LEWIS MORRISON was in town last week, having closed his tour with his dramatic company.

EDNA COURTNEY has been engaged to play Fairy Womanhood in "The Seven Ravens" at Niblo's Garden.

ASSISTANT-TREASURER J. F. BARDEN of Wallack's Theatre is at Long Branch, N. J., with his family.

DAVID BELASCO arrived from England July 26 in time to meet Mrs. B., who returned from San Francisco to meet him. Mr. Belasco will look after the stage business in "Called Back," and will see that it is done after the style of the London production.

ADRIAN K. AARINSEN, who says he is a musician of Albany, N. Y., is under arrest in this city on a charge of having passed a forged note for $32.

IDA BROOKS (or Briggs), said to be an actress and a resident of Buffalo, N. Y., was found in a helpless condition near Central Park on the evening of July 26. She had been, it was supposed, too freely indulging in opium. She was held at the Fifty-seventh-street Court.

THE COSMOPOLITAN THEATRE is this week occupied by the Astor-place Co. of colored tragedians in "Othello." George Wood's connection with the house did not close with the departure of Bianci e Corelli's Opera Co., July 26, as published in a Sunday paper. Miss Corelli, we hear, has been offered the theatre for a return engagement in September.

MANAGER CHARLES E. CALLAHAN of the Lizzie Evans Co., together with Ida and Richard Burroughs and George Deyo of the company, arrived in town from Cincinnati last week.

HARRY MINER'S BOWERY THEATRE.—To a packed house above and full below, Cooper and Lord were to have opened the ball evening of July 28, but, Cooper proving to be under the influence of the weather, the team had to be taken off. Yamamoto, Japanese illusionist and wire-walker, was next on the bill to do three acts; but, putting in an appearance half an hour late, his turn was dispensed with by the management. Sanders and Dean were therefore the first to put their business in, followed by Daisy Norwood in popular melodies; Fannie Beane and Chas. Gilday in "Frog Hollow," in which they were eminently successful; Barney Reynolds, the solid German comic; Kelly and Ryan, popular Irish comedians, whose success was as great as it was merited; Geo. Melville, an agile clown juggler and balancer; Louis Wesley (not on the bill, but hastily substituted for the truant), and Johnny Saunders' comical donkeys. The performance concluded with A. H. Sheldon and the regular company in "Married Mashers."

THE LONDON THEATRE.—A good audience assembled evening of July 28, when Joe J. Sullivan's 'Maloney's Raffle" Co. was the attraction. The Aarons, Frank Campbell, Lester and Walker, Watson and Richards, the Big Four (Smith, Waldron, Cronin and Martin) and Musical Dale are in the olio. This theatre will close Aug. 2, for general repairs and refitting, and reopen Saturday, Aug. 23, with a strong specialty company.

TONY PASTOR'S THEATRE.—Dan'l Sully and his "Corner Grocery" began their eighth week at this theatre to a packed house July 28, playing to the largest Monday-night audience since the opening, showing that this laughable comedy's stock of popularity is on the increase.

ONE DAY last week it was said that Ernest Gye had, after all, decided to throw up his contract to manage the Metropolitan Opera-house next season, on the ground that the talent he desired had demanded too high terms. Two days later this report was contradicted, though it was intimated that, unless Gye could secure certain singers at smaller money, he would be compelled to secure a modification of the agreement which had been provisionally adopted between the Metropolitan directors and himself, representing the Covent-garden directors. The matter was yet in doubt July 29.

AUSTIN BURROW, a scenic-painter in the employ of FOX & Schaeffer, was shot in the side July 26 by a friend named Thomas A. Widlake, while on board the steamer Jesse Hoyt on a trip to Sandy Hook. Burrow refused to enter a complaint against Widlake, who was discharged. Subsequently it was shown that the shooting was accidental. Burrow is in the Chambers-street Hospital.

THE following have been engaged by Legrand White to support Minnie Maddern in Taylor's society comedy, "Caprice," which will be produced at the New Park Theatre Aug. 11: Arthur H. Forrest, Charles Stanley, Henry Miller, T. J. Herndon, Hudson Liston, H. P. Brook, Melbourne McDowell, Mary Wheeler, Mary Maddern and Lillian Wallack. "Caprice" will be produced under the stage direction of W. H. Daly.

"DISTRUST" went through a process of revision at the hands of its authors after its initial production at the Fourteenth-street Theatre last week, and the critical fraternity were invited to "do" the piece again evening of July 28, when the play and the company opened their second and last week. It will suffice to say that "Distrust" is not yet an acceptable work. Manager Colville has open time at his theatre weeks of Aug. 4, 11 and Sept. 1 and 8—the two latter unexpectedly, previously booked attractions having canceled.

"THE BOHEMIAN GIRL" was sung by the specially-organized company of John F. Donnelly and Gus Kerker at the Bijou Opera-house July 28, opening the second of Donnelly and Kerker's four weeks' lease of the house. Enrico Campbell appeared as the Count, Alfred Wilkie as Thaddeus, H. S. Dale as Florestan, Edward Connell as Devilshoof, Rose Leighton as the Queen, Adelaide Randall as Arline and Kate Hatfield as Bada.

MILTON NOBLES and Mrs. Nobles are domiciled at "Democracy Hall," on the Shrewsbury River, N. J., this being their fourth Summer among the oystermen. Mr. Nobles tells us that his next season will be devoted principally to "Love and Law," and that, instead of cutting down expenses, in view of election excitement, he intends to take out a company more expensive by fifty per cent. than that of any preceding season. His people are himself and Dollie Nobles, Agnes Herndon, Florence Hinton, Tillie Barnum, Mrs. J. R. Healy, Frank E. Aiken, George W. Barnum, Max Fehrmann, Frank Land, Wm. C. Anderson, Edwin L. Mortimer, J. Duke Murray, Chas. W. Warren, Louis Vogler and Louis W. Browning. His next season begins Sept. 1.

"THE TWINS" appear to be giving their managers as much difficulty as is the case with all of that ilk. Up to noon of July 29 no one had been selected for the dual role. N. C. Goodwin's name had been submitted for the play, but he was not satisfactory to Simmonds & Brown. Charles Stanley and M. A. Kennedy have also been thought of, and George Holland has expressed a wish to be engaged. It had been agreed by Lester Wallack and Chas. Frohman (who is interested with Wallack in the play) to come to a final decision on the 29th, at which time Simmonds & Brown were to agree to the actor selected or withdraw the play until someone satisfactory to them should be secured.

MORE ENGAGEMENTS.—Since our last report Simmonds & Brown have concluded the following engagements for the coming season:

For Shook & Collier's "Blue and Gray" Co.—William H. Reeves; for Frank Mayo—James H. Taylor; for the Strategists—L. F. Howard and wife and C. F. Titus; for Shook & Collier's "Lights o' London" Cos.—Harry Blight and Walter Standish; for Sellers & Chapman's "Her Atonement" Co.—C. W. Charles, Frank Tannehill Sr., Mrs. Dean and two children, and William Dell; for Shook & Collier's "Stormbeaten" Co. — John Kissell, Charles Thomas, Robert Trinneer and Nettie Guion; for Campbell & Macdonough's "Siberia" Co.—Helen Windsor; for Campbell & Macdonough's "Separation" Co.—Aug. Fillot; for the "Ranch 10" Co.—Charles Chappelle; for "Twins" Co.—H. W. Montgomery; for Maggie Mitchell—Otto Vogler; for Tillotson's Co. in "Queena," etc.—Ethel Greybrooke; for Campbell's "White Slave" Co.—Isabel Morris; for "Rag Baby" Co.—Rillie Deaves; for Sanger's "Dreams"—Lillie La Verde; for T. AMY LEE, who has been engaged by the Kiralfys for the season, will make her debut in "Sieba" as the leading soubrette.

MINNIE PALMER will close her engagement at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool, Saturday night, Aug. 16, and immediately after the performance leaves for Queenstown by a special train, arriving there in time 17 to catch the steamer that will have left Liverpool the day previous.

DEXTER SMITH of the Hub is to try his pen at playwriting for the Madison-square Theatre.

Buffalo.—At Music Hall the Fortescue "Wellfed Dora" Co. began a week's season July 28. Chas. Fostelle and company played "Mrs. Partington" all last week to immense audiences. The venture of Manager Smith in introducing a season of first-rate amusements at popular prices during the Summer months is proving a grand success. The audiences in attendance would overflow any theatre of ordinary capacity.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE.—Mr. and Mrs. Joe Allen, Mlle. Albertina, Master Augusta, Mlle. Loraine and Al. Lawrence, Harry Sefton, James J. Fields, Ella Norman and the Ashbury Bros. are here this week. Left 26: Wade and Mack, Kitty Woolson, Alice Smith, Alice Daly, Leopold and Bunnell, Connors and Kelly and Carrie Belmont. Business excellent. The People's is happy in the completion of a new front and entrance, which is an ornament to the house and was made at considerable expense. It is an evidence of the financial success of the enterprise, and places the theatre on a par with the other first-class resorts.

Rochester.—At Falls Field Summer Theatre, George K. Fortesque's Burlesque Co. closed a week's engagement July 26 to crowded houses. Lizette Ellani's "Fun in a Boarding-school" Co. opened 28 for one week. "East Lynne" will be produced next week. A grand midsummer carnival of sports will be held at the Falls Field Garden Aug. 7 and 8, under the management of C. H. Smith.

IN ALBANY, the Leland Opera-house, Royal Museum and Novelty Theatre remain closed.....At the Royal Pavilion, Rice's "Fun on the Bristol" Co. opened a week's engagement July 28. The audience tested the capacity of the canvas. Gus Bruno, E. H. Carroll, Dickie Delaro and Lulu Evans are the chief people. A large business was done at this establishment the past week, and Loyal's European Specialty Co., which furnished the entertainment, proved to be first-class in every particular.

IN BROOKLYN, at the Summer Pavilion Theatre Loyal's European Specialty Company opened July 28.....The attraction 28 at the People's Pavilion Theatre, which is receiving a fair share of patronage, was Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels.

IN TROY, Apollo Hall, the oldest hall in town, seating about 1,200 people, having windows on both broadsides and located near the river, has been opened as a varieties by Charles Freudenthal, with Frank McClane as manager. Its second week began July 28, with Hardman and Brevarde, Grace Arnold, Emil Grofe, Virgie Marshall, Alice Adams and Frank McClane billed. Those closing 26 were Siegfried Abraham, Fred Wensel and Charles Konollman.....At the Grand Central Theatre July 25 there was an announced "glove-fight to the finish" between Egan and John Hughes, described in Ring, on another page.....Emma I. Coe, professionally known as Irene Hinckley, formerly an actress at the Leland Opera-house, Albany, has been granted an absolute divorce from Edward W. Coe. In the afternoon a horse fell in the jockey-race, breaking a leg. The animal was shot.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia.—John H. Clark, until recently the owner of the Olympic Garden here, has leased the Club Theatre, on Vine street below Eighth, for the coming season, and intends running it as a variety theatre, paying particular attention, however, to boxing matches and such sports. His aids will be Harry C. Bryant as stage-manager, C. N. Edwards as musical-director, and Major Mange as treasurer. The theatre will open Aug. 2, with Sheeran & Redmond's Novelty and Boxing Combination of thirty artists, including James and Lydia Sheeran, Dixie Garland, Joe Redmond and Ada Clifton, Lizzie Smith, Dalton and Watts (the one-armed boxers), Dave Fitzgerald, George Taylor and Robert Turnbull (three "champion" lightweight boxers), Harry Budworth, Dick and Hattie Stewart, Harry C. Bryant and Nellie Austin.

BUFFALO BILL'S SHOW closed its two weeks' engagement July 26, and departed considerably better off financially for its venture here. The second week's business was even better than the first, and the attendance averaged fully 10,000 at each performance. It is said that Mr. Cody intends returning to the Quaker City early in the Fall if he can secure the Gentlemen's Driving Park again.

THE SUMMER GARDENS are enjoying unusual prosperity, and have undoubtedly succeeded in attracting more people this season than ever before. Nearly all the places are crowded every night. At Thron's a new programme was presented 28, consisting of D. B. Emery and Miss Russell, cornettists and Swiss bellringers; Mlle. Francesca, Nellie Hague and May Arnott. The Liliputian Opera Co. are at the Mænnerchor still, but they will be succeeded Aug. 5 by the Archduke Joseph's Hungarian Gipsy Band. Mr. Campbell, the business-manager of the Mænnerchor, is to be given a benefit on that evening also. At the Tivoli Carl Sentz's Orchestra is supplemented by Mme. Girard Gyer's "Star Troupe of Roman and Heathen Statuary."

Pittsburg.—The Opera-house, Library Hall and Academy of Music remain closed.

HARRIS' MAMMOTH MUSEUM.—This is the last week of the opera season, and it will be the best. Five operas will be given, beginning with "Chimes of Normandy," which will be followed by "Pinafore," "Mascot," "Billee Taylor" and "Olivette." The last named was the attraction last week, and drew full houses. Considering the weather, the business was phenomenal.

SIXTH-STREET DIME MUSEUM.—Connors Bros., Chas. Tracey, Leaton Sisters and a bevy of professional beauties to the number of fifteen made their introductory bow July 28. The maidens taking part in the beauty contest are all comely and far in advance of any similar collection heretofore on exhibition in this city. The Emma Wells Comedy and Concert Co. closed 24 rather abruptly on account of the failure of their musical sketch "Penelope." Business was tolerably good during the past week.

BREVITIES.—Manager Harry Williams is in Baltimore.....Harry Ellaler will be at home this week.....Baby Venus will appear as the stellar attraction in a liliputian opera company next season, under the management of Geo. IN SCRANTON, at the Academy of Music the season will open Aug. 2 with Barlow, Wilson & Co.'s Minstrels. Manager Lindsay informs your correspondent that the season promises well, many of the best companies being already booked, although he has taken the precaution to limit the attractions until after the elections.....The Globe Dime Museum closed July 19 for the season. It will be opened in September as a variety hall.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston.—The Boston engagement of Lulu Hurst seems to have rather "petered out." She opened at the Globe Theatre, Tuesday, July 22, to a big house, which, I understand, happened through extensive papering, and was to have remained an indefinite period. She closed, however, 26, having had generally poor business, and the Globe Theatre doors are once again closed, presumably for the season.

BIJOU THEATRE.—John J. Braham has secured the Bijou for a limited term, and on 28 he reproduced "An Adamless Eden," which has been somewhat altered since its initial production at Oakland Garden a few weeks ago. The piece ran to only mediocre success at the Garden during its two weeks there, the chief reason, probably, being the extremely chilly weather of that particular fortnight. The cast on the occasion of Monday's performance was the same, practically, as was noted at the Garden, and the same numerous female attaches of the show were also observed. There is an even chance that the Bijou engagement of "An Adamless Eden" will witness a decided improvement in business over that experienced at Oakland Garden. Offenbach's dainty bit, "The Alsatians," sung by Fanny Rice and Fanny Corey Daboll, preceded "An Adamless Eden," and Kate Davis interpolated her pleasing specialties.

BOSTON MUSEUM.—"Fantine" continues to surprisingly good houses. The principals are accorded nightly encores. The new opera will run until further notice, probably through week of Aug. 18.

OAKLAND GARDEN.—Dan Mason's Comedy Co. in "The Two Widowers" opened a week's snap 26 to fair house. Atkinson's Comedy Co. in "Peck's Bad Boy," Billy Carroll leading, closed to medium business week ending 26. Hopkins' Colored Troubadours and Camp-meeting Shouters gave one of their peculiar "sacred" concerts Sunday evening, 27. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bingham appear for the last times this week on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons in their feats of ventriloquism and necromancy.

PARK-SQUARE GARDEN.—Austin & Stone's Specialty Co. opened for a week 28 to a good house. The combination includes Lew and Lena Cole, Fostell and Archer, Fox and Ward, the Leslies, Reynolds and Arnold, Edson on the accordion, Ed. Clarance, James Hearne, Dollie Webb and the Belmont Brothers. Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels closed to a week of big business 26. Nellie Everett appeared 27, evening, in her peculiar entertainment called "Everettism"—a spiritualistic exhibition—assisted by Lena Cole, Annie McVeagh and Ed. Clarance.

BOYLSTON MUSEUM.—Excellent houses were observed here 28, when these new faces appeared: De Beaulieu Brothers, Del Bartineo, Linda Winthrop and Ella Martyne. Departures 26: Lena Baker, William Edison, Carrie Monroe and Annie Lewis. Saville and De Forrest hold over from last week.

AUSTIN & STONE'S DIME MUSEUM.—After running for forty-eight consecutive weeks of big business, this popular museum announces that, after Aug. 2, it will be closed for upward of four weeks. New scenery and properties are to be secured, and the stage is to be enlarged. Fine houses were noted in attendance at the opening of this week. The same strong attractions were presented.

KEITH & BATCHELLER'S MAMMOTH MUSEUM.—Lucia Zarate attracted excellent audiences all last week, and is retained this week as the principal attraction. Some seventy-seven babies, ranging in weight from five pounds to fourteen, were fitted to one of Lucia's finger-rings at a special matinee 26, but not one of the infants could force the tiny band of gold below the proper knuckle. The regular curiosities are attracting the customary amount of attention.

GLEANED.—Frederick Hanlon of the Hanlons was in town July 26.....John T. Craven is to play Coombs in "The Silver King" with the Boston Theatre Traveling Co. Ella Mayer will go with the same company.....George C. Boniface Sr., Geo. C. Jr. and wife, and Stella Boniface are at their North Scituate cottage for the Summer. All arrived from 'Frisco last week, young George "quitting" the "Orpheus and Eurydice" Co., as THE CLIPPER some weeks ago predicted he would.....Barlow, Wilson & Co.'s Minstrels have been re-engaged for the Museum, and will appear Aug. 18. This is the way Manager Field compliments a good attraction.....Louise Paullin, May Stembler, Elma Delaro, Gus Kammerlee, F. P. Ham and John Gilbert are recent engagements for "Zanita," the Boston Theatre's new spectacle....."Willie" Seymour is at Canton, Mass. He will direct rehearsals of Roland Reed's Co. in "Humbug," before going out with Campbell & Macdonough's "Separation" Co.....The Boston Theatre Traveling Co. will do "Youth" and "The Silver King," and will be on tour two months.

LATEST BY WIRE.—A cable from Paris to The Herald of to-day confirms the news printed in THE CLIPPER'S Boston notes two weeks ago that Miss Ober has secured Agnes Stone Pyne of London (a "Nell Gwynne" favorite) for the Ideals next season. She will alternate leads with Geraldine Ulmar. Miss Ober left England to-day on the Celtic. Audran the composer at her request made several changes in the music of "La Dormeuse," which the Ideals do as "Suzette."....The report printed in The New York Times that the Kiralfys had leased Music Hall in this city, and were thinking of making a theatre of it, etc., is incorrect—at least, nothing is known here of such a scheme. The Kiralfys' Boston engagement in the Winter is to occur at the Globe Theatre. A meeting of the Music Hall corporation was held this afternoon, July 29, but I do not hear of such a lease being effected.

ILLINOIS.

Chicago.—"American Style," a comedy-drama by Wm. M. Lawrence of Milwaukee, was presented by Robert McWade's Co. at the Grand Opera-house July 27, for the first time in this city, to a good sized audience. This play had been previously produced in Milwaukee, and is said to have been well received; but, as it has not been reviewed in THE CLIPPER, I append the cast and a synopsis of the plot:

Gottlieb Duker	R. McWade
Hilda	Bertha Fleback
Col. Moaks	J. A. Lane
Herbert Fenton,	Fred. Goldthwaite
Eliphalet Badgley,	J. W. Burton
David Martel	Chas. Coon
Bob Weaver	Chas. Norris
Frank Thorburn,	A. Kenwood
Marvin Stanwood,	D. R. Wilson
Billy Halpin,	Georgie Woodthorpe
Deborah Ann	Illie Moses
Clementine	Annie Burton
Mrs. Sherwood,	Fanny Hooker

Gottlieb Duker is an old German gardener, who lives with his daughter Hilda in an humble cottage near a fashionable watering-place. Gottlieb cordially hates "dot American sthyle," while Hilda has become greatly fascinated by it. This fact she tries to keep from her father, and so she hides her finery in a niche in the rocks near the cottage. A robbery has been committed at the residence of Mrs. Melton, the aunt of Herbert Fenton, lover of Hilda, by Frank Roberts, a victim of gambling. He hides his booty in the nook where Hilda has concealed her finery. Hilda is suspected of the theft, and the officers finally succeed in discovering the stolen property where it had been placed by the real robber. Gottlieb, forced from the evidence to believe his daughter guilty, in heart-broken accents acknowledges the crime himself and is taken away to jail. The curtain falls on a very effective scene. The second act occurs in Gottlieb's cottage. He has been bailed out by Eliphalet Badgely, but fears the trial the following day. In this mood he confesses, so to speak, his innocence to Eliphalet and Herbert, and announces his purpose of leaving the country without delay. Hilda enters at this moment, accompanied by a party of her aristocratic friends, to whom she does not wish to disclose her identity as the daughter of the poor old man. Divining her thoughts, Gottlieb manages to excuse himself, and leaves the house utterly broken down. Overwhelmed by shame and remorse, Hilda goes to find her father, but he has fled. In the next act she appears as a member of a theatrical company. Gottlieb is a disguised fruit-vender, and Frank Thorburn appears, now a drunken vagabond. Gottlieb, in an attempt to save his life, is severely injured, and Thorburn, with the assistance of a bootblack, carries the old man to his lodgings. Hilda meets her lover, Herbert Fenton, on the stage of the theatre and is rudely repulsed by him. The villain of the piece, Colonel Moaks, figures conspicuously in this scene in a fruitless attempt to secure the affections of the heroine. In the last act everything is cleared up, mainly through the instrumentality of the bootblack. Hilda makes a hit in a play written by Herbert. Gottlieb is frustrated in an attempt to take his own life and finds himself heir to a large fortune, Frank Thorburn confesses, the lovers meet, and everything is lovely.

The play is weak and disconnected, lacking continuity of action. The first act promises fairly, but the interest gradually flags, and it is impossible to make a success of it with this defect. Of the acting, McWade's pathetic German character was good. Miss Fleback was acceptable as Hilda in the lighter scenes, but lacked feeling where sentiment was required; Burton and Moses did as well as possible with their weak comedy parts, and Lane made the most of the harmless roue. The Wallack Theatre Company closed a four weeks' engagement 26, playing "Lady Clare" and "Moths," two weeks each, to fair business. Next week, the Acme English-opera Company in "La Grande Duchesse."

MCVICKER'S THEATRE.—"Shadows of a Great City" entered its third week 28 to a fair attendance. The piece is a creditable production, and, with one or two exceptions, the cast is good. Mrs. Yeamans, Miss Tracy and Mr. Edeson do especially good work. Business, however, is not satisfactory. "The Pavements of Paris" is underlined.

HOOLEY'S THEATRE.—"Adonis," by Rice's Burlesque Company, is enjoying profitable patronage, being now in its fourth week. The house was fairly filled 28. Mr. Dixey has introduced some new character-sketches, including an imitation of Irving and some Sol Smith Russell business, and the burlesque has undergone several improving changes since the opening. Carleton's Opera Company is underlined.

EXPOSITION BUILDING.—The second week of Liesegang's Summer-night concerts opened 28 to liberal patronage.

IN PEORIA, no hall shows have put in an appearance for several weeks, and the public have but poorly patronized the Dime Museum. The Grand Opera-house will open Sept. 1, and the Adelphi later in the season.

RHODE ISLAND.

Providence.—At the Sans-souci Gardens Lizzie Evans' Co. opened July 28 in "Fogg's Ferry" to a good-sized audience. The piece seemed to merit fair applause. The company is a good one, and large houses will probably be seen throughout the week. Julia Hunt in "Florinel" is booked for Aug. 4 and week. The Corinne Merriemakers closed July 26 to a fine business. The Inman Sisters, Steve Corey and the Lucier Family made the hits.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—Ida Siddons' Female Minstrels opened matinee of 28 to a large attendance. They stay one week.

HEALEY & BIGELOW'S SUMMER PAVILION.—Wellesley & Sterling's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Co. packed the tent 28, and will probably draw well during the week. The Petrie and Fish Co. are due Aug. 4 and week. The World's Ideal Specialty Co. closed to a large business July 26. Efforts are again being made to suppress the performances here, but the management will continue, as on previous occasions, to present the best of talent to the public. Healey & Bigelow opened in Lawrence, Mass., 28, a similar show.

Cincinnati.—The busy hum of preparation may be heard at all of our places of amusement, and a general house-cleaning is going on. The different houses will open for the season as follow: Vine-street Opera-house, Aug. 2, burlesque and variety; Havlin's, Aug. 24, Bella Moore "Mountain Pink" Comb.; People's, same date, attraction undecided; Harris' Museum, Aug. 30; Grand, Sept. 1, with the Hanlons; Robinson's, Sept. 1, J. T. Raymond; Heuck's, Sept. 1, Emma Abbott Opera Co.

HARRIS' MUSEUM.—F. Harris, of Pittsburg, Baltimore, Louisville and Cincinnati Museums, has been by no means idle during the Summer vacation. He has been amplifying, redecorating and enlarging every one of his establishments, and the patrons of the Cincinnati Museum especially will scarcely recognize the place in consequence of the thorough transformation it has undergone. Handsome Eastlake ceilings have taken the place of the old-time lath and plaster; the partition walls have been arched, thus by at least fifty per cent. increasing the holding capacity; and the rear wall of the concert hall has been removed to make room for a stage for minor entertainments. New scenery has been painted for the main stage, and the entire building has been redecorated, repainted and refitted. It can be mentioned in this connection that Mr. Harris has effected the purchase of Prof. Worth's extensive collection of curiosities.

HIGHLAND HOUSE.—The Louise Lester Opera Co. continue to give four performances a week at this resort to very large audiences. The troupe is giving the best of satisfaction, staging all of the operas in excellent shape and costuming them with elegance and care. Miss Lester is a hard-working, talented little lady, and is already a great favorite. Last week "The Pirates of Penzance" was the attraction. Aug. 30, "Grand Duchess," with enlarged chorus and orchestra.

LONDON THEATRE.—Business the largest of the present season at this house. Closing July 27: James Mathews, Ada Page, Randolph Children, John Sullivan. Remaining over: Ned Thatcher, Ella Thorne. Circus, lingered in the city a few hours last week.....Manager John Havlin will produce his new play, "The Wonderful Book," by Scott Marble, for the first time at his own theatre, Aug. 31, with a strong cast. If one may judge from the reading of the play, it is destined to be an immediate success.....A. B. Murillo, manager of the Spanish Students, was here last week to arrange for an early appearance of the troupe in this city.....Kate Beebe of this city has been engaged for "old-woman" by the Bella Moore "Mountain Pink" Co.....Manager James Whallen of Louisville, Ky., was visiting friends here for several days last week.....Eddie Snelbaker of the Theatre Comique, Washington, D. C., is visiting relatives here.

Columbus.—Business has fallen off at the different places of amusement. The Continental Dime Museum, however, with the Bageard Opera-bouffe Co. as an attraction, has had a continuation of its usual large business. "Billee Taylor" will be the attraction for the evening performances, commencing July 28, and a varied bill for the matinees.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Business has been good. Performances are up to the standard. The arrivals 28 are the Dolan Bros., Golden and Drayton, Eva Lester, Hattie Myers, Agnes Atherton and Boos' Brass and Orchestral Band of Jackson, Mich. Denham; Don Quixote, W. H. Kohnle; Minister of War, W. F. Rochester; Minister of Treasury, Robt. Stanley; Antonio, Walter West; Innkeeper, P. Boverick; Donna Irene, Blanche Chapman. The first and second nights proved wet ones, and the second and third acts were finished in the hall; so it would be doing injustice to the company to attempt to criticise these performances. Later in the week the piece was very nicely done.

ESHER'S ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Lena Rivers and Mary King are announced for this week. Eula Clair, Mlle. Estelle and Minnie Osborne closed 27. Business good Saturday night and Sunday, but very light balance of week. Jake Esher has so far recovered from his gout as to be out again.

J. C. Kilgore of Cincinnati will be the acting-manager the coming season. The theatre is now being repainted and decorated. John Maloney will be the treasurer, taking Harry Noxon's place. Dickson (who is now passing the Summer in Canada) will be at Pope's.....Gus. Thomas, late assistant-treasurer at Pope's, who made such a hit as Bill Lewis in "Editha's Burglar," will probably go out with the Dickson Sketch Club.....One of our variety halls is offered for lease, and a judicious manager can make a fortune there. See advertisement.....Geo. H. Adams and Wm. Eunice are here organizing a "Humpty Dumpty" Combination to take the road under the management of Wm. H. Smith of the Standard Theatre.

NEW JERSEY.

AN UNFORTUNATE DIFFICULTY between Charles M. Pyke, one of the members of the opera company now performing at the Virginia Garden, Atlantic City, and the managers of the place, occurred on Tuesday afternoon, July 22, and resulted in Pyke stabbing J. N. Fort, the treasurer. Notwithstanding the fact that the Virginia has been successful financially from the opening night, Schofield & Fort, the managers, have never come to time in the matter of salaries, and both Louise Manfred, the prima-donna, and Mr. Pyke have been continuous creditors of the house. July 22 was pay-day, and the company refused part payment of salaries. During the dispute Pyke and Fort stepped aside to argue the case alone, and during their talk the former stabbed the latter in the abdomen, inflicting a slight wound. "The Mascot" was billed for production that night, but the company refused to go on and there was no performance, and, instead, a concert was given by the orchestra. By Wednesday, however, the difficulties between the managers and the company had been amicably adjusted, and "Patience" was put on, and is still running. Manager Fort's wounds healed rapidly, and he was about again the next day. The affair was very much regretted afterwards by everyone concerned in it, as the house had been doing well and the company was a good one. Everything is running smoothly now.

Among the attractions are the Shedmans, Powers Brothers and Petres, Lon and Bill Branford, Maretta Meyers, Dolly Davenport, De Bar Brothers, Charles Schebel and George Vance. .....The season at the Opera-house will open Aug. 25 with N. DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL NOTES.

— Fred De Belleville is this week resting at Beverly, Mass.

— Herbert Kelcey and wife (Caroline Hill) are among the professionals at Cohasset, Mass.

— It is said that E. E. Rice has arranged for the production of "Blue Bird" next season.

— The "Her Atonement" Co. (Sellers & Chapman's) will include Eleanor Moretti, Alice Gray, May Dean, Frank Tannehill Sr., C. W. Charles, Walter Gifford, W. H. Dell, J. J. McCartney, Master Frank Dean and Daisy Dean.

— It is said that Rose Eytinge may star during the coming season under the management of J. C. Whitney of Whitney's Opera-house, Detroit.

— Charles S. Rogers says that Mattie Vickers, besides continuing to play "Jacquine" next season, will produce a new comedy written for her.

— W. H. Gillette has left the Madison-square Theatre, and rumor has it that he will produce his new play early in the Fall.

— The late Mme. Taglioni's stage costume would have surprised ballet dancers of the present day. The fact was that she never in the whole of her career wore a dress which allowed her knee to be seen. Her own high ideas of her art were well expressed in the rebuke she administered to one of her admirers in Milan, who begged her to shorten her dress "just a very little." "Signor," replied the dancer, "I do not dance for men; I dance for wives and for daughters."

— A dispatch from Louisville, Ky., July 28, says that Otis Strong, a member of the Yale Glee Club, who lost a leg in a wreck near Charleston, Ind., last Winter, on the Ohio and Mississippi Railway, brought suit to-day for $20,000 damages.

— Will J. Duffy will act as business-agent for Carrie Swain during the coming season, opening Sept. 1 at Norwalk, Ct.

— The trial of the action for damages brought by Mrs. Georgina Weldon in London, Eng., against Mr. Semple, a medical man who had signed a certificate for her seclusion as a "person of unsound mind," was concluded July 28. A verdict in favor of Mrs. Weldon for £1,000 was rendered. Mrs. Weldon conducted her own case.

— "The Nightingales," a new sensational drama in four acts, by Mark Melford, was originally produced at the Royal Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, July 10, and was fairly successful.

— L. J. Tulloch, late agent of the Corinne Merriemakers, joins "The Power of Money" Co., No. 2, as advance-agent.

— "Les Deux Voleurs, or a Pretty Pair of Paris Purloiners," an "original" operatic burlesque, was produced at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool, Eng., July 9. The libretto is from the pen of Lloyd Clarance, and the music by Willary Haunt. A critic states that the burlesque is a not respectful perversion of "Robert Maccaire."

— It is said that J. G. Peakes of the Hess Opera Co. will not go with that troupe next year.

— Adah Richmond, who is meeting with considerable success as prima-donna at the Spanish Fort, New Orleans, La., has been secured for the entire Summer season in that city.

UNINTERRUPTED SUCCESS OF THE GREAT SPECIALTY FOUR,

THE OLYMPIA QUARTET

WILLIAM KEOUGH, PETER RANDALL, M. J. SULLIVAN, HUGH MACK,

FIRST TENOR. SECOND TENOR. BARITONE. BASSO.

In their Refined, Witty and Original Military Sketch, entitled THE INDEPENDENT COLORED CADETS. This sketch is not composed of Music-cues to introduce songs, but is replete with dialogue consistent with the characters we assume, and the idea we wish to convey; and introduces legitimate drilling, burlesque commands, military evolutions and catchy music. IT IS ENTIRELY different from any specialty ever produced, and specially adapted to suit all classes. We appeared at the Boston Theatre (Actors' Fund Benefit) before the elite of Boston, managers, editors and members of the press, and THE BOSTON GLOBE remarked: "The Olympia Quartet made the hit of the show," and THE BOSTON HERALD endorsed our act by words to that effect. We have received innumerable compliments from managers and members of the profession, and many flattering press-notices, a few of which we give below.....BOSTON THEATRE, April 24.—HUGH MACK, Esq.—DEAR SIR: I heartily endorse the sketch portrayed by the Olympia Quartet at the Actors' Fund Benefit, as the most novel and refined black-face sketch I have ever seen. Yours respectfully, EUGENE TOMPKINS, Manager.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The bill at the Academy of Music this week is very attractive. Harry G. Richmond is a host in himself, but when the merits of the Olympia Quartet are considered, the portion of the evening they occupy is certainly among the pleasantest things to be treasured in one's memory.—PITTSBURG CHRONICLE, March 10, 1883.

A decidedly new and entertaining feature of the combination was the Olympia Quartet. Their act was novel, and made the big hit of the evening. Their singing was enjoyable, and their drilling added greatly to their excellence.—CINCINNATI ENQUIRER, Jan. 28, 1884.

The Olympia Quartet as the "Independent Colored Cadets" made a hit, their singing, drilling and marching were excellent.—BUFFALO COURIER, Jan. 22, 1884.

Of the rest of the company, which includes the Olympia Quartet in their military sketch of the "Independent Colored Cadets," is the best black-face act we have ever seen.—BROOKLYN EAGLE, Nov. 13.

And the "Independent Colored Cadets," the musical sketch of the Olympia Quartet, was enthusiastically received.—PHILADELPHIA CHRONICLE-HERALD, Dec. 12, 1884.

And the act of the Olympia Quartet, who, aside from their pleasing singing, give a military drill that is capital.—CHICAGO INTEROCEAN, Feb. 4, 1884.

Engaged for three weeks, commencing Saturday, Aug. 16, at Grand Central Theatre, Phila., with N. S. Wood's Company, and for season of 1884 and '5, commencing Nov. 17, with Wheatley & Traynor's Combination. Keough and Sullivan please take notice, and act accordingly. "Hi Guy'nur." "Skate oh! All alive oh!"

Managers having open dates previous to Nov. 17, address HUGH MACK, Bayport, L. I., or care of CLIPPER.

— Augusta Chambers is to do leading business in "The Two Johns" Co. next season.

— J. R. Adams is at his home in Linden, Mass. He joins his brother, the clown, Aug. 14 in St. Louis.

— Alfred Audran, son of the singer at the Opera Comique, Paris, France, and brother of the well-known composer, died recently at Marseilles, in his thirty-sixth year, of consumption.

— An entertainment in aid of the Children's Home was given at the Avon Beach Hotel, Bath, L. I., July 23. Wm. F. Burroughs and Jas. S. Burdette, the Weber Male Quartet and other artists participated, and $150 was realized.

— Nelson Wheatcroft is said to have written a play in which Adeline Stanhope may star.

— Gertie Blanchard late of the Boston, Mass., Museum, is to go with Boucicault next season.

— The Hanlons' "Voyage en Suisse" for next season will include Edward and Frederick Hanlon, E. V. Sinclair, L. F. Nagle, R. M. Carroll, R. S. Carroll, Laura Billings, John G. Neagle (manager) and Percy Meynall (treasurer).

— George Chaplin will continue as Janauschek's stage-manager.

LATEST CIRCUS, VARIETY AND MINSTREL GOSSIP.

THE FOUR FRISCOS are enjoying a two weeks' vacation in St. Louis, Mo., preparatory to their opening in that city. There will be no change in their membership during their coming season.

J. J. MAGEE is passing the Summer at the residence of his cousin, James E. Magee, near Philadelphia. M. J. Needham and Charles J. Young are also guests of James Magee.

BILLIE DEVERE (not the William recently taxed with abduction in this vicinity) has been enjoying himself in Chicago all Summer.

NETTIE WOOD informs THE CLIPPER that she is "alive and well." She was chronicled in last week as having died suddenly in Toledo, O., July 15. The letter notifying us to that effect was in a handwriting very much like that of the denial. Miss Wood says she was in Grand Rapids, Mich., on the date of her alleged death, 15; but we happen to know that in Cleveland, 14, she mailed a letter to a New York professional, in which she had written in so despondent a vein that her friend feared suicide. Happily, however, she is "alive and well."

TONY PASTOR will play several combinations at his theatre next season, including "The Rag Baby," "Parlor Match" Co., Sibon & Elliott's Spectacular Show, the Dalys' "Vacation" Co., the Howard, Boston, Combination, etc., etc.

CHARLEY MCCARTHY, known several years ago in connection with Sam Rickey, recently reached this city, via London, Eng., after a long wandering over the globe.

FRANK E. MCNISH arrived at his home in Rochester, N. Y., July 27, where he will remain a few days before leaving for Michigan to join Thatcher, Primrose & West's Minstrels.

SMITH & MATHER'S MINSTRELS have closed, but will reorganize. The proprietors will meanwhile rest in Winona, Minn.

BILLY EMERSON'S movements appear to be mystifying dramatic papers on two continents. We have within a week heard of him as being in Chicago, New York City and en route to London, Eng. As a matter of fact he is in San Francisco this week, as our correspondent telegraphs us, and there is no chance that he will, as reported in various papers, join Haverly's Co. in London.

PROF. HAAS has joined Washburn & Bunting.

CHARLES HOLTON, one of the agents of Cole's Circus, leaves it Aug. 10 to go as general advance-manager for George H. Adams' "Humpty Dumpty" Co.

TONY WILLIAMS AND JOE CANNON benefited at Wheatly Dramatic Hall, Philadelphia, Pa., July 21.

JAMES HENNESSEY of the Hennessey Bros. was at his home in Milford, Mass., last week.

NOVELTY TIPS.—James Redmond, Alfred Dorian and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Nash are at Rockaway, L. I., working, and not "rusticating."..... Hugh and Jennie Barton are in Fargo, D. T..... Lottie Winnett is in Grand Rapids, Mich..... Myles Morris arrived in town July 28..... One of our Bridgeport, Ct., correspondents sends word that Lou Sandford, while bathing there the other day, had a narrow escape from a perpetual wetting. Press Eldridge, her husband, happened to be where he could do the most good, and he rescued her from drowning..... Louis Robie, manager of Harry Miner's Eighth-avenue Theatre, is kept very busy preparing for the opening of that place, Aug. 18..... The Olympia Quartet have closed for next season with Wheatley & Traynor..... Fred C. Bryant has been engaged by David Bidwell for a six weeks' season in New Orleans, opening July 28..... N. S. Wood will play an engagement Sept. 1 with his own combination at Miner's Eighth-avenue Theatre. The Olympia Quartet and Harry Rogers have also been engaged for that occasion..... Is it to be Bryant and Hoey or Hoey and Sheppard? Maybe it is Bryant and Hallam. Then, again, rumor has it that it is Fred Bryant alone. This conundrum agitates the musical teams..... Geo. F. Hoppert, assistant treasurer of Harry Miner's Bowery Theatre, has been re-engaged for next season..... Annie Boyd (Mrs. Harry Morris) presented her husband with a baby boy, July 27, in Mt. Clemens, Mich..... John R. Dyliyn and Kate Stockton were to have been married in Mt. Clemens, Mich., July 27. Miss Stockton is a non-professional, and one of the prettiest girls in Mt. Clemens..... WHY MME. ROSSITER WAS NOT AT OAKLAND GARDEN.

BOSTON, Mass., July 25, 1884.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER: Your Boston correspondent, in reviewing by telegraph the first performance of "An Adamless Eden" at Oakland Garden four or five weeks ago, took care to advise you that the lady orchestra-leader billed as "Madame C. C. Rossiter of London, Eng.," and who was announced to make her debut on this occasion, turned out to be Marie Mulle, one of the Mulle Sisters. In connection with this fact, the following, in a letter from Madame Rossiter, may be of interest: "I did apply to the manager for the position of musical-director, but, not hearing from him immediately, I accepted another engagement, which offered itself in the meantime. After this I received a telegram, offering me the position in Boston; but I was then, of course, obliged to decline it. Seeing my name announced in several papers as having conducted the opera at Oakland Garden, I wrote to the manager for some explanation of this use of my name and European reputation. Receiving no reply from him, I am compelled, in justice to myself, to ask your kind assistance in making public the fact that some other lady (who I know not) is, or at all events has been, making an unauthorized use of my name."

BILLIARDS.

A CARD FROM MAURICE DALY.

NEW YORK, July 29, 1884.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—Dear Sir: As one of the projectors of the proposed series of tournaments, I desire to place myself right before the public. One or two parties have gone out of their way to draw conclusions about something they, as it would appear, know absolutely nothing about. At the same time they condemn a matter which is directly to their own interests.

The scheme was laid before three of my professional brethren. Like myself, they thought the idea a good one, and determined to lend it a helping hand, knowing, as we did, that it was for the benefit of billiards in general. We were fully aware of the fact that there was a large number of roomkeepers, able, energetic, and having the proper status to take hold of the scheme and push it to a pronounced successful result, leaving no taint behind, as some of the alleged friends to billiards would insinuate. Whatever the result may be, the scheme was conceived with honorable intentions, and the leading roomkeepers were appealed to for their views. The matter was left entirely in the hands of the roomkeepers; for without their support the affair must necessarily fall to the ground. It was thought through this means that some excitement could be enthused into billiards every year at a trifling expense to all connected with the game, and not be forced to rely entirely on the manufactures, who have been obliged to take care of the billiard interest with but little outside assistance, except from the press.

I am sorry, for my part, that it has awakened some false impressions in the minds of people who view the matter from a wrong standpoint. As the roomkeepers, who are the best judges of the affair, have not condemned, but encouraged the project, their impressions go for naught. Yours truly, MAURICE DALY.

HE WAS NOT PARTICULAR ABOUT HIS HAT.—Says The Richmond (Va.) Whig: "On Monday night the pool-rooms above Eighth street were visited by a countryman who was not ashamed to wear a coarse hat and a cotton shirt. He stood up in No. 8 shoes, with flat heels, and seemed to care little for drink; but he watched the city boys play pool with a real rural interest and asked many questions. Finally, when the players were few, he essayed to knock a few balls around the table, and some good-natured proficient joined him in punching for beer. The beer was lost by the countryman for a season, and until the boys took an 'interest' in the 'oddity,' and then, in less than four hours, the stranger won $75 from the good fellows, whom he took good care not to beat more than one or two points. The following night there was not a man in town who would dare to go into a pool-room. The countryman came from Philadelphia."

STRAY SHOTS.

Roomkeepers in New Orleans, Buffalo, Pittsburg and a few other places have written encouragingly as to the proposed project of a series of tournaments by the leading players in the different cities, and Jacob Schaefer wrote suggesting that the contests be for the championship. Maurice Daly informs us that he himself is not disposed to make any further move in the matter. He leaves it altogether with the roomkeepers..... Pierce, the retiring superintendent of John J. Murphy's room, Boston, realized about $250 by the day's receipts benefit given him by the proprietor..... The license on billiard-tables of all kinds kept for public use in Chicago has been reduced from $25 to $10..... The Boston cushion-carom championship has come quietly to an end. There has been no contest for it in about six months. W. P. Marshall may revive it in another form..... A tournament in a modest way is to begin at the St. Clair room, Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 4. It is to be for the amateur championship of Allegheny County..... Thomas Foley is another billiardist who does not approve of the proposed billiard tournaments in various cities.—Chicago Herald..... William Wallace on July 22 defeated James Hamilton of South Norwalk, Ct., at pool, by 11 to 3, for an announced stake of $50 a side. A correspondent informs us that another match, this time for twice as much money, has been made..... A Detroit, Mich., correspondent writes that Shaw and Dankelmann made a good impression in that city. On July 19 Shaw was beaten by 6 to 2 by young Hogan, whom Detroiters regard as a most promising pooler. He and Shaw played for "coin of the realm."..... Shaw and Dankelmann have been giving exhibitions in Windsor, Can..... As a result of Father O'Connor's battle with the liquor-dealers of Newark, N. J., Sunday pool-playing in that city will probably come to a halt..... Thomas Foley was in Pittsburg, Pa., last week..... W. A. Penny, who for some time past has had his headquarters in Scranton, Pa., has by his gentlemanly manner made many friends there..... Billiards is a trifle dull in Pittsburg, Pa..... Fred A. Ryers of Buffalo, N. Y., scored 21 games to Joseph T. King's 16 in that city July 26. King gave five games odds. The contest was announced as for $100 a side..... Albert Frey has been giving exhibitions in Scranton, Pa., where he was the guest of "Doc" Stiles of the Backus Billiard Parlor. He left July 25 for Binghamton, N. Y..... Samuel Gibson has recovered his health, and is again at Green's room, Philadelphia..... Our Scranton, Pa., correspondent writes that Fred Brandt is recovering from the effects of the severe fall he incurred several weeks ago..... A number of Chinamen play billiards in this city; but pool is their "strong hoit." The Japanese here, on the other hand, prefer caroms always..... James H. Davis of Pittsburg, Pa., is still severely sick..... George Rudolph's room, Ninth and Sansom streets, Philadelphia, has been closed..... The Mirror of Philadelphia says that Isaac Taylor of that city intends to retire from the manufacturing business..... William Rockhill is slightly "under the weather."..... Jerry Daly has returned to this city; but his vacation will not be up until Aug. 1..... Brighton Beach has Tim Flynn for steady company..... Mme. Albert Garnier, having ceased to study for the opera-bouffe stage, has settled down in Paris as bookkeeper for a dressmaking establishment..... The next monthly meeting of the N. B. A. will be held Aug. 3 at W. H. Morris' room, Eleventh near Chestnut, Philadelphia.

THE TOURISTS.

The Chicago 'cycling tourists arrived safely at Boston, Mass., July 26, after a very pleasant trip. Everyone was in the best of health and spirits, and the schedule of Manager B. B. Ayers worked to a charm. The utmost courtesy and hospitality were encountered all along the route, and were not infrequently reluctantly declined owing to prior arrangements. During the short stay of the travelers in Boston, where they break up and return home as they please, they were made at home by the local clubs, who vied with each other in attentions. The following outline of their journeying will show the extent of country traversed: July 13, started from Chicago by rail; July 15, Niagara Falls to Toronto by rail and boat; July 16, Toronto to Newcastle, 46 miles on wheel; July 17, Newcastle to Brighton, 45 miles on wheel; July 18, Brighton to Napanee, 47 miles on wheel; July 19, Napanee to Kingston, 22 miles on wheel, and thence by boat to Round Island; July 20, Round Island to Montreal by boat; July 21, Montreal to Plattsburg by rail; July 22, spent around Plattsburg; July 23, Plattsburg to Caldwell by boat; July 24, Caldwell to Saratoga by rail, and thence to Mechanicville, 23 miles by wheel; July 25, Mechanicsville to Clinton, 26 miles by wheel; July 26, Clinton to Boston, 42 miles by wheel.

CHAMPIONSHIP BICYCLE RACE.

About eight thousand persons witnessed a race for the twenty-mile professional championship at the Belgrave-road Grounds, Leicester, Eng., July 12. The contestants were F. Wood, T. Battensby, F. J. Lees, R. Howell, E. Weston and F. Bane, and the closing portion of a well-contested and fast race is thus described in The Sporting Life: "Just half a mile from the finish Howell spurted and challenged for the lead, which he failed to get. The attempt, however, was the signal for the spectators to pass the barriers. By strenuous efforts, however, the track was kept clear, and entering the last lap Battensby was just in possession of the lead, with Wood and Lees in immediate attendance, while Howell was fully two lengths farther in the rear. Half a lap from home Wood made a splendid spurt, and quickly rushed ahead, reaching home four yards in front of Battensby, who beat Lees by two yards for second place. Howell was four yards farther in the rear." The winner's time was 1h. 6m., the last mile having been ridden in 2m. 46s. Battensby rode the first and second miles in 2m. 52s. each, and was ahead at the finish of every mile except the last.

ROCHESTER (N. Y.) BICYCLE CLUB.

This club, having recently fitted up their track at Falls Field, gave a series of races July 22, there being a large crowd in attendance. The first race, for club members, one mile, was won by J. Lennox, in 4m. The second race, free-to-all, one-half mile, was won by A. Schirck, in 1m. 40s. The third, a slow race, seventy-five feet, was won by W. J. Curtis, in 1m. The fourth, a relay race, one mile, with four relays, was won by W. J. Curtis, in 4m. The fifth event, a riding and running race, contestants to ride one-eighth of a mile and run same distance, was won by C. Klein, in 1m. 5s. The sixth race, free-to-all, three miles, was won by A. Schirck, in 12m. 30s. R. A. Punnett acted as starter, Geo. H. Bishop as scorer and Chas. Happ as timer.

OHIO DIVISION, L. A. W.—The second annual races of the Ohio Division, L. A. W., under the auspices of the Cleveland Bicycle Club, will be held at Athletic Park, Cleveland, Aug. 18, 19. Programme: First day—One-mile, novices; five-miles, State championship; one-mile handicap, open; three-miles, open; one-mile, tricycle, State championship; two-mile handicap, open; half-mile, L. A. W., championship. Second day—Half-mile, tricycle, open; one-mile, State championship; ten-mile, open; two-mile, State championship; quarter-mile, open; one-mile, consolation. Except where otherwise designated, all of the events are for bicycles. The prizes will consist of gold and silver watches; gold, silver and bronze medals, etc. Entrance-fee, 50 cents for each event, entries closing with Alfred Ely, 873 Prospect street, Cleveland, O., Aug. 10.

NEW RULES.—The new racing rules of the L. A. W., which are now in course of formation, will provide for the allowing of class of machine races, thus admitting the Pope Cup, and the racing board is constituted a board of record which shall alone have the right to hear and judge all claims. The championship under the change is open only to League members resident in the United States, and no prize exceeding $50 in value can be given for a championship contest. The racing rules have been thoroughly reconstructed and the duties of the officers more clearly defined. The principal discussion has arisen regarding the sanctioning of races, and the probability is that this necessity will be removed from the record requirements.

A NOVELTY IN ST. JOHN.—A one-mile bicycle race, the first event of the kind ever witnessed there, took place in St. John, N. B., July 19. Result: First heat: W. Maclachian first, in 4m. 17⅗s. Charles Coster did not finish and J. L. Donald fell from his machine while spurting on the back-lap, cutting his face and putting him out of the race. Second heat: W. Page first, in 4m. 39s.; E. Turnbull a good second, J. M. Barnes a poor third. Final heat: Maclachian first, in 4m. 18⅘s.; Page second, by twenty yards. The track, five laps to the mile, was in good condition, and the slow time made shows how much room for improvement in bicycle-riding there is in that section.

TRICYCLE CHAMPIONSHIPS.—The annual races for the one and five mile amateur tricycle championships of England were held at the Crystal Palace track, London, July 12. The final heats resulted as follows: One mile—C. E. Liles, London A. C., first, in 3m. 29⅘s.; H. J. Webb, London T. C., second, by about a dozen yards. Five miles—C. E. Liles, London A. C., first, in 17m. 30⅕s.; S. Lee, Sutton T. C., second, by eight yards; H. J. Webb London T. C., third, by four yards. Liles rode the last quarter-mile in 40⅕s., flying start.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) BICYCLE CLUB.—In addition to the club events to be decided at the field meeting of this organization at Narragansett Park Aug. 2, there will be a three-mile race, open to all amateurs, for a Butcher cyclometer, a McDonnell cyclometer and a Duryea saddle.

THE Boston Ladies' Sociable Club is known as the Nemo Cycling Club.

ABBOTT BARRETT of Boston, Mass., has accepted the position of referee at the annual Springfield tournament.

SYDNEY LEE, amateur, on July 14 essayed to eclipse Nixon's performance of riding a tricycle 100 miles in 7h. 23m. 33⅘s., on the Crystal Palace track, London, Eng. A cold wind was greatly against the accomplishment of so stupendous a task, and Lee was compelled to abandon the undertaking after riding sixty miles in 4h. 37m. 15⅗s. He will try again.

THE funeral of Ernest Metcalf, a prominent member of the Enfield Bicycle Club of Liverpool, Eng., was attended by about fifty members of his club, who followed the hearse mounted on their bicycles. One of the members on foot wheeled the bicycle of the deceased in the cortege.

E. TAGETMEIER and H. R. Reynolds Jr., bicyclists residing in London, Eng., are credited with riding 1,053 and 8,380 miles respectively during 1883.

LIVES AND BATTLES OF THE IRISH CHAMPIONS,

From 1769 down to the Present Time.

WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY NED JAMES.

BARNEY DOGHERTY.

I larned me reading and writing,
At Ballyragget, where I wint to school,
'Twas there I first took to fighting,
With the schoolmaster, Misther O'Toole;
He and I had many a scrimmage,
The divil a copy I wrote.
But not a gossoon in the village
Dare thread on the tail iv me coat.

Another of the tillers of the soil who never wore silk stockings or kid gloves was Barney Dogherty, but he was none the worse for that. Barney's heart was in the right place and warmly beat for his country's weal, while his hands were open to a friend or clenched for a foe. His earnings were made by the sweat of his brow, when a shilling a day was good pay for working on the railroad or in the sewers, or any kind of employment where pickaxe and shovel come into play. Dogherty claimed to belong to the same stock which fought the renowned Tom Belcher and others, and was born in Ireland about 1815. He was a good lump of a fellow, with no flies on him, and quick to take up any slurs about home. While working with a gang of lumpers at Battersea Fields, near London, he was challenged by a fellow knight of the pick, named Bill Perry, over a quarrel and turn-up between them, and the stakes contended for, we believe, were £5 a side.

Dogherty's Battle with Bill Perry.

The admirers of milling in the military village of Chelsea, where the "saloon of arms" of Alec. Reid was once a centre of attraction, were all alive on Nov. 3, 1835, from the arrangement of a "field-day" to decide the best-man question between two pugilistic heroes of the locality. These were Barney Dogherty, a sprig from the Emerald Isle, and Bill Perry, a young navvy, whose displays with his digits, if not quite scientific, were determined and dangerous. Perry was backed by a sporting butcher, Dogherty by a circle of his enthusiastic countrymen. In weight the Emeralder had the advantage of nearly 14lb. Each man was waited on by a member of the P. R., and the regulations were carried out. The fixture was Wimbledom Common, whither miscellaneous groups were seen wending their way at an early hour; but the police scouts were wide awake, and on reaching the intended scene of action it was "no go," and the disappointed crew looked as blue as their enemies. A move became inevitable, and new ground was taken opposite The Ship at Mortlake. Here the men setto; but after seven rounds, all in favor of Perry, the lobsters were again on the scent, and another retreat was made towards Barnes Common. Here also it would not do—the pursuers were on the heels of the "dying dustman," and a helter-skelter sort of march took place over Putney Bridge. Here a council of war was held, and it was at last agreed to march for Lechmere Common, close to the sporting grounds of the Baron De Berenger in the King's Road. Here all was right—a fresh ring was formed without interruption, and the sport was resumed and concluded.

On squaring elbows there was a good deal of sparring, and Perry dodged left and right. After some heavy exchanges and a rally Barney was down, weak. The fight was prolonged for six more rounds, during which Perry had it pretty much all his own way, punishing Barney severely; still the poor fellow came up as game as a rhinoceros, and would not give in till his seconds, seeing he had no chance, cried "Enough!" and his friends were all satisfied he had done his best to win. Dogherty turned out to be too stale for active operations, added to which he was slow and awkward in his style of setting-to.

Perry was a scientific young fellow, and a hard hitter, he being then only 16 years old and a lumping boy, or navigator by calling. To some his getting in the great capital, so far removed from the village of Tipton, may seem strange, as railroads were comparatively unknown. The way was by land, but the walking was good, and if such a man as Peter Corcoran had to do most of his journeys on foot, it would be odd if the unlettered, uncouth, K-legged Perry should fare any better. Perry was not the Slasher then, but was christened so afterward by Vince Dowling; and, what with canaling or tramping, able-bodied youths and men traveled all over England, Scotland and Wales on foot. Had they the price of staging it, they would look at the coin many times before making such a foolish use of their bit of money, as a bed, a meal, a pot of beer and a pipe could be had for a "bob" or so, and they were never tied to time, so that one "yellow boy" would keep them about three weeks, and by going twenty-five or thirty miles a day even London could be reached in time from any point.

With a pretty good reputation, the navvie returned to the "Black Country," and in the year following fought Ben Spillsbury at Oldbury, and next met Jim Scunner near Wolverhampton. As the Tipton Slasher, he began to loom up, and was matched with Deaf Burke, but it ended in £15 being forfeited to "Deafy." Perry was then in the hands of Johnny Broome, nicknamed "Young Ducrow," from his being such a close imitator of that celebrated circus-performer, the best 140lb man of the period, who among others had beaten John Gorick, alias Bungaree, for £600, Jack Hannan for £1,000, and was presented with a gold belt at Tom Spring's. When Ben Caunt returned from America on March 16, 1842, he had with him Charles Freeman, the Giant. Broome, who since he took charge of the Rising Sun, in Air street, a comparatively obscure locality, running from Piccadilly into Regent street, had made it one of the most famous sporting resorts in London, got jealous of their joint success, for they were immense cards, and no mistake, Ben standing 6ft. 2½in., weighing 203lb, and 27 years old; Charley standing 6ft. 10½in., weighing 252lb, and 25 years old. The English and American giants appeared first in England at the Queen's Theatre in Liverpool, where not a seat was to be had a few minutes after opening the doors, and the same excitement was kept up wherever they exhibited. Caunt having been billed as champion of England and Freeman as champion of the world, Johnny Broome issued a challenge in Bell's Life, and, to throw cold water on the Caunt-Freemen "spec," offered to find a novice to fight either one of them for £100 a side. Tom Spring, on behalf of Ben Caunt, responded to the call, and said that Caunt would back Freeman against Broome's unknown. A deposit was staked at once by Jack Langan's old opponent on behalf of Freeman, which was covered by the then sixteen-year-old smooth-faced Harry Broome, Johnny's brother, the latter being away from home at the time. This was on Sept. 29, after Freeman and Caunt had been traveling a little over five months. Articles were signed at the old Castle Tavern for Freeman and Perry to fight for £100 a side, at catch-weight, half-way between Tipton and London, in December of the same year. The deposits were put up at the houses of Johnny Broome, Johnny Walker, Jim Burn and Tom Spring. Freeman and Perry first met in a field near Sawbridgeworth Dec. 14, Perry being then 23 years old, six feet in height, and weighing 186lb, to Freeman's 238lb. Caunt and Dick Curtis waited on the American Atlas, Ben Terry and Tom Parker on the Tipton Slasher. It was after 4 o'clock P. M. ere the men got to work. The American got first knockdown with his right on the Englishman's head in the second round, and also first throw in the third. The Slasher gained first blood with his right from Freeman's left eyebrow in the sixth round. After the fiftieth round it became so dark that the men could only be told from the light color of their skins and drawers. The Slasher pursued his dodging, getting away and falling system, occasionally making left and right hits at the body and shoulder, and sometimes appearing to recoil from the effects of his own blows, but without producing any turn in his favor. Freeman hitting left and right, and now and then seizing his man, lifting him up and flinging him down, but almost invariably avoiding falling on him, in one instance actually making an arch over his carcase, his head and legs on the ground, amidst the acclamation of the throng. In the last few rounds there was an evident attempt to draw Freeman into the Slasher's corner, around which a desperate set of ruffians had collected, who, by the most offensive vociferations, endeavored to intimidate and alarm the American. He, however, kept his temper and came up every round cool and collected, grumbling only at the Slasher not standing up to fight. In the 69th round the Slasher exclaimed: "I've got you now, old fellow!" But the words were scarcely out of his mouth when Freeman hit him down with his left. The darkness, combined with a fog, now became so intense that it was impossible to see what was doing from one side of the ring to the other. The referee declared his utter inability to form any judgment of the character of the fight, and, unable to get both umpires to agree on the expediency of putting an end to the battle, he jumped into the ring, and, getting between the men, declared he would not permit them to prolong the contest, and the crowd after various mishaps, some getting stuck in the marshes, others tumbling into the canal, etc., got back to the nearest railway-stations.

Freeman and Perry met again on Dec. 20 of the same year at Cliff Marshes, near Gravesend, when the following celebrities were noticed among the crowd: Ned Painter, Tom Spring, Peter Crawley, Tom Oliver, Jim Burn, Ned Adams, Johnny Walker, Nat. Langham, Harry Orme, Johnny Broome, Tom Maley, Jimmy Shaw, Owen Swift, Jim Cross, Jack Gardiner, Jimmy Moore, "Stunning" Joe Banks, etc. The Giant had increased considerably in weight in the meantime, and had the same seconds as before, while in the place of Tom Parker Harry Broome was substituted as Perry's other second. The Giant this time got first-blood from the Slasher's nose in a rally in the 4th round. When Freeman didn't knock Perry down or throw him, as in the 14th and 22d rounds, the Britisher played the drop-game throughout, expecting the Yankee would lose his temper and strike him foul. In the 37th and last Freeman was ready, when the Slasher rushed to close quarters, struck him in the shoulder with his right, but, on the Giant attempting to return, he went down without a blow. A call was made by the seconds of Freeman on the umpires, who disagreed, and on appealing to the referee he pronounced "Foul;" and, no doubt, had a similar appeal been made to him before, he would have given a like decision.

The Giant was immediately proclaimed the winner, and was taken out of the ring after fighting 39m. The stakes were given up to the American at Spring's Castle Tavern Dec. 27, when Charley made quite a speech, and when the Slasher was toasted his only reply was to stand up and give his front locks a couple of pulls forward in a butler kind of style. Broome said he was out of pocket £115 by the match, and shortly afterwards started on a tour with the Tipton, among other places visiting Dublin. Freeman broke his engagement with Caunt, and exhibited in theatres, circuses, etc. He could ride two horses very well, and as a somersault-thrower was much above the average. Freeman, in conjunction with Hervio Nano, whose stature was less than 3ft., appeared at the Sadler's Wells Theatre in a burlesque of their own entitled "Long and Short." His death occurred at Winchester Hospital, and in the old churchyard where his remains were interred, in the Summer of 1860 was erected a very fine monument to mark the spot, bearing the following inscription:

"Charles Freeman, the American Giant, who departed this life after long illness in this town, Oct. 22, 1845, aged 28 years.
This monument is erected to his memory by his fellow-countryman, J. C. Heenan."

Perry afterward fought Hazard Parker of West Bromwich, and Tom Paddock of Redditch. Perry then claimed the championship of England, whereupon Johnny Broome, who hadn't forgot the £115 yet, matched his brother and second to Perry—viz., Harry Broome—against his former protege, when the Slasher was treated to a dose of his own medicine by hitting Broome when down. Peter Crawley was the referee, and Perry threatened to lick him, when the burly "Rumpsteak," notwithstanding he was half a century old, threw off his coat and waistcoat and prepared for action; but better counsels prevailed, and the young Tiptonite was forced away. A fresh match was made between Broome and Perry for the championship, ending in a forfeit of £25 on the part of Broome, in August, 1853. From this time until June, '57, nothing of moment occurred, except Johnny Broome cutting his throat at the Wrekin Tavern — afterwards kept by Jimmy Shaw — in Broad Court, Drury lane, the last day of May, '55. A new champion of England belt having been gotten up by subscription, open for all weights and countries, Bill Perry at once put in the first claim, which was disputed by Tom Sayers, and Sir Thomas became champion of England by

A Card to My Professional Friends and Others.

No one more than myself deprecates the necessity of inflicting upon the readers of THE CLIPPER matter that is (to say the least) demoralizing to all concerned. Yet to be threatened with histories is detrimental to me, when I am conscious of the fact that, were the truth known, "THIS WORLD'S GREATEST PREVARICATOR" would be covered with pitch. It is patent to all that he is trying to rub some of it on me. The detestable manner in which he has tried to crawl out of a pit he dug for himself is proof sufficient to convict him. However, I will add a little more merely to show that he has claimed heretofore to have received letters from respectable parties when such has not been the case. In proof of which I append the following letter from a prominent citizen of Bakersfield, Cal., received shortly after he claimed to have one from the same party giving me a bad reputation in that State:

CHAS. ANDRESS—KIND SIR: To-day my attention was called to a card in last CLIPPER from Taylor, using my name, which he was unwarranted in doing, as it is false. I never wrote him about you—good, bad or indifferent—and why he should make use of my name to slander you is astonishing to me, and I hasten to write you that he is mistaken. When I saw you I told you he had been here, and he told me his story and I listened, but never any remarks or any letters upon the subject from me. So you can depend on it that he is mistaken. With kindest regards to your wife and Druzsila, I remain your well-wisher, W. H. SCRIBNER.

Also to the fact that he has been writing to his whiskey chums in many places I have visited the past season, trying to induce them to write scurrilous letters about me for publication. He has succeeded in a few instances, the parties foolishly wallowing in the mire he prepared for them.

The following letter from the former secretary of the "Southwestern Opera-house Circuit" and owner of the finest opera house on it, the leading banker of Butler, Mo., and a gentleman well and favorably known among the profession, is offered as a refutation of statements made in a solicited letter from a BOY in the little town of Keytesville, Mo.:

TO OPERA-HOUSE MANAGERS.—Prof. Chas. Andress has given three entertainments in my house and has given universal satisfaction. I have found him a gentleman and strictly honorable and fair in his dealings with me. He has taken unusual good care of my house and properties. I had contracted for a season of four nights, but as he was compelled to omit one night on account of rain, I charged him only for three nights. Our people here like him as a man, and his show is a good one, worthy of patronage everywhere. Very respectfully, WM. E. WALTON, Manager.

The assertion that my business at Sedalia, Mo., was a failure is also untrue. Although raining every day during the week, the following letter from Dr. Wood, owner of Sedalia's $70,000 Thespian Temple, will prove that, under the circumstances, it was very satisfactory.

TO THE PUBLIC AND THE PROFESSION.—Andress' Carnival of Novelties played in my opera-house one week and matinee, and gave the very best of satisfaction. His opening house was only medium well-filled, but each succeeding night was better until the last night (Saturday), when the house was crowded from pit to dome. I heartily recommend him and his first-class entertainments to the public. He is a gentleman on and off the stage. Yours truly, H. W. WOOD, Manager and Sole-proprietor Wood's New Opera-house, Sedalia, Mo. May 27, 1884.

How is that for a city in which you made a dead failure The original letters copied here are now a THE CLIPPER office, and were unsolicited.

Does this profound idiot, the champion wrestler of prestidigitation (in his mind), think that people are so gullible as to swallow such tissuey falsehoods as you have been publishing? The nearest you have come to telling the truth was about sleeping in the hall. I sometimes deem it necessary (as was the case in Lamar, where I could not procure all the keys to the hall, and for other reasons) to have my property-man stay in the theatre over night with my birds and animals. I get no reduction from hotel-bill for this, neither do I ask it. Refer to Lamar House, where my company was quartered while there. Blitz, Everett, Fakir of Ispahan or etc., WAKE UP! and be a man (if you can), be truthful, try to master your profession, let red liquor alone, and some day in the dim future you may tumble to the folly you have committed in spending your money and racking your brain to create some plausible deception about your superiors. And more, do not threaten me with publishing any scurrilous attacks emanating from such a contemptible source as the paper you named. A THING that is so low as to attempt to do another an injury simply for the reason that my doorkeeper refused to admit him free of charge to each performance is about on your level. That it had no effect on my business was proven by the largest audiences at each entertainment. You may sneer at my birds and animals. You only prove that you are serious, as you once tried to educate a poor little innocent canine, and because its intelligence exceeded your own, you brutally murdered it. Prof. Parker informed me (while in New York) that you were writing him with a view of adding himself and his Dog-circus to your "snap," but as his salary per week would more than equal your gross receipts for some length of time, you were compelled to make your "special" "U-roped in Co." (comprised of a Vermont boy pianist) suffice. "Waltz me again." Respectfully, CHAS. ANDRESS, Proprietor of Andress' Carnival of Novelties and Trained-animal Show.

M. F. QUIGLEY, Secretary.
